JULY SALE

Bought your pillows & comforters elsewhere? Guaranteed you overpaid!!!

CAVEAT EMPTOR (BUYER BEWARE)

Don't be misled by advertisements for European goose down comforters at supposedly "SALE PRICES". We'll show you that most of those ads do not represent good values at all. Just because these advertisements are from major department stores - do not be fooled-all down is not alike.

The quality of goose down is measured in fill power (also known as loft). Fill Power is the amount of cubic inches one ounce of down will fill. Our 800 plus Siberian Goose Down will fill between 800 and 850 cubic inches of space. "The Company Store" catalog always lists the fill power of their goose down. Bring in their catalog and we'll generally save you 50% off their prices.

Goose Down Comforters are an investment, with proper care a fine quality comforter will last a life time. Our high quality 100% cotton shells, or tickings, are divided into baffle boxes. The baffle box has a mesh channel separating the top from the bottom of the comforter. The baffle allows the down to give you maximum loft without collecting in one section of the comforter. We do not cater to the consumer that is more interested in price than quality. Our most valuable asset is our customer. We will only sell a product that we believe to be the highest value at the best price. Cheap low quality down should fill garage cans not pillows and comforters. All our goose down pillows and comforters contain 100% goose down even though it is legal to combine 70% down and 30% feathers and label the item 100% goose down. Remember feathers are those things with quills, down is similar to tiny balls of cotton, absolutely no hard quill. Our goose down comforters and pillows are machine washable because they only contain down.

The larger the individual down cluster the higher the fill power. The higher the fill power the better the comforter will insulate thus providing more comfort to you. Since you are spending 1/3 of your life in bed it should be as luxurious as possible. - Why not?

Which One Is The Clone?

Vacationing In The Hamptons Or Campaigning Around New York State

By Dan Rattiner

Almost every day, it seems, Hillary Clinton is photographed in the Hamptons. She's at a luncheon hosted by furrier Steve Basso in Water Mill. She's visiting a senior citizen's center in East Hampton. She's at a dinner party in Southampton at the home of Carl Spielvogel and Barbaralee Diamonstein. She's visiting a day care center in Northwest.

Here is a woman who is, correct me if I'm wrong, not only First Lady of the land, but is running for the Senate of the United States. She's having lunch at the home of Michael and Nancy Silberkleit of East Hampton. She's giving a speech at the Long Island Farm Bureau in Riverhead. She's having a day at the spa at Gurney's Inn in Montauk.

What is this woman doing vacationing in the Hamptons when she has all these other things keeping her so busy? She's been here just about every day, according to the New York Post, Daily News, New York Times, the weeklies and TV stations and most of the New York magazines.

And yet, and I do not say this lightly, she is making appearances in Schenectady, and in Buffalo and in Binghamton. She's seen waving to the crowd in Lake Placid, at a supermarket opening in Albany and with a bunch of babies in Plattsburg. As you are reading this, she is making a speech in Rochester and later in the day she's speaking to patients in Syracuse. But she's also at a gala in Southampton. I don't get it.

Well, for a long time, I didn't get it. And then I came to the obvious conclusion. There are two Hillary Clintons. One is here. The other is everywhere else in the state. She's relaxing in one place. Campaigning in the other. And then occasionally, she is by the side of the President in front of the White House in Washington. Something she can do by choppering down if she can get one of the two of her free for a short block of time.

When I first realized there had to be two of her, I thought that, oh, they must have found her a double. There are many occasions you see where somebody has a stand in. They look almost like

A man runs in.

"I've just gotten a letter," he says, waving a letter. "It's from the White House. Bill Clinton wants Hillary cloned."

"Which Bill Clinton? The real one or the other one?"

* * *

She goes to some private medical facility, like Mayo or Betty Ford or Mt. Sinai, and, at great expense, they scrape off a little DNA from her nose, and they have cloned a new nose. And from the new nose, they have grown a whole new Hillary Clinton. They can do this. It's like a miracle.

I have only one problem with this. If Hillary gets elected Senator, which one of them will serve in Washington? The one that botched up the government health plan, got involved in Travelgate, an overbilling problem with Whitewater, an ethnic slur and some public documents that mysteriously appeared in her dining room? Or the Hillary that's a clean slate, pure as the driven snow?

And when did this cloned Hillary start making public appearances? Could it be it's the clone who has handled the Monica Lewinsky matter with such dignity? The clone who wrote It Takes a Village? The clone who seems so genuinely caring about the young, the poor, the disabled and the elderly?

All of the above behavior has taken place in just the last two years. It is, indeed, so strikingly different than what had come before. Maybe the REAL Hillary, the mean one, is here in the Hamptons. Maybe the nice one is upstate.

I don't know. I'm so confused. But I know which one of them I would vote for. The nice one. If it's the one on the ballot, of course.

Could it be the clone who has handled the Monica Lewinsky matter with such dignity?

the real thing, and if they are just seen fleetingly, they can get away with it. Up close, no two people look exactly alike after all.

Yet, Hillary Clinton, on almost every occasion, is looked at up close. A double might get away with it for one appearance or two. But after that, there's no way.

The only explanation for all of this is that what we are seeing, in one place or the other, is a clone of Hillary.

* * *

At one of the most famous medical laboratories in America, two men are talking.

"Who better to clone than Hillary Clinton?" one of them asks.

"What a great idea," says the other.

"She's smart, witty, charming. And she's the first lady. It's perfect."

This year's Artists-Writers softball game will take place on Saturday, August 19 in Herrick Park, East Hampton. The game has been played with only a few weather interruptions since 1948. Among this year's players already signed up are actor Ed Burns, Roy Schieder, Bill Beutel, Rick Leventhal, Bryan Burns and Jerry O'Connell. The game benefits The Retreat, East End Hospice, and the East Hampton Day Care Center.

Prince Albert of Monaco spent the weekend in the Hamptons at the home of Anton and Robin Katz. On Saturday he was honored at the first of the weekly Mercedes Benz Polo Challenges held at David Walentas' farm in Bridgehampton. He was invited to throw out the first ball, but when he did, the seat of his pants ripped wide open. Recovering nicely he retreated to a bathroom where he changed into sturdier duds.

At the polo match were millionaires Neil Hirsch of Mecox and Peter Brandt of Bridgehampton who are undoubtedly the best amateur polo players in the Hamptons. Peter was wearing a gift of sapphire cufflinks that he recently received from his wife, Stephanie Seymour. At least he had them on back in the VIP tent.

David and Julia Koch are expecting their second child. The new arrival will join David Jr. who is now two. The Kochs own not only a house in Southampton but also the late Jackie Onassis' former Fifth Avenue apartment.

Senator John McCain will be honored at a cocktail reception at the home of Cathy and Paul Manafort of Bridgehampton this Friday at 7 p.m. The co-host is Georgette Mosbacher. The $1,000 per person admission includes a trustee membership in Straight Talk America.

Paul and Chris Weitz who are sons of designer John Weitz of Bridgehampton are making quite a name for themselves out in Hollywood. They co-starred in Chuck & Buck, co-directed American Pie and co-wrote Antz. Now they will co-direct Chris Rock in his latest movie Down To Earth, back in New York, where they grew up.

There are still openings for David Baker's Harbor Music Day Camp 2000. The camp will be held at Boys Harbor from August 26 to September 1. Call 631/725-0067.

Nicholas Gage, author of Eleni and A Place For Us will speak at the Greek Orthodox Church this Saturday about his work.

Peter Ottmar of AAA Entertainment, until recently known as Backbay Broadcasting, has announced the purchase of two eastern Long Island radio stations: WBAZ and WBSQ in Southold.

Why did the world's best golfer choose TLC?

He insisted on seeing the world's best laser eye center.

When it came to improving his vision, Tiger wasn't about to play games. So the world's best golfer took dead aim at the world's best laser vision correction center, TLC Laser Eye Centers. After all, TLC doctors have done more successful laser eye surgeries than anyone. Anywhere. "I felt TLC had the experience and track record I demanded," says Tiger, who now sees better than 20/20. "I am extremely pleased with the results."

So are his fans. Following surgery, Tiger went on to win 5-straight official PGA tournaments. A feat that hasn't been duplicated in over 50 years. "Thanks to TLC, the hole and everything now looks bigger," says Tiger. Including his winnings.

When it comes to your vision, insist on the best. For a free consultation, call 1-888-CALL-TLC.

The Long Island Rail Road is making major track improvements. Most branches will be affected.

Through Sunday, August 13

The extensive track rehabilitation program begun in 1997 continues on the Main Line west of Jamaica Station. Service is being affected as follows:

■ Hunterspoint Ave. Service

◆ Most Hunterspoint Ave. trains are being diverted to/from Long Island City.

◆ At Long Island City, you may transfer to/from the 7 subway at the Vernon-Jackson Station, two blocks north.

◆ You may also transfer to the New York Waterway ferry service at Long Island City.

■ Main Line Service

◆ Six AM and three PM trains are being cancelled or combined on the Babylon, Far Rockaway, Hempstead, and Long Beach branches.

◆ Other trains are adding stops.

◆ Service remains the same to Kew Gardens, Forest Hills, and Woodside. However, departure times may change slightly. There is also one less AM peak train stopping at Woodside.

◆ During the week of August 7-11, there will be temporary platforms at Kew Gardens, Forest Hills, and Woodside.

◆ If you work in lower Manhattan, you can travel to the Flatbush Ave. Terminal and transfer there for Manhattan-bound subways.

■ Information Services

◆ Timetables dated July 15 include all Main Line changes.

◆ We urge all customers to pick up special timetables, brochures, or flyers outlining travel alternatives. Also, listen for Public Address announcements for more up-to-date information.

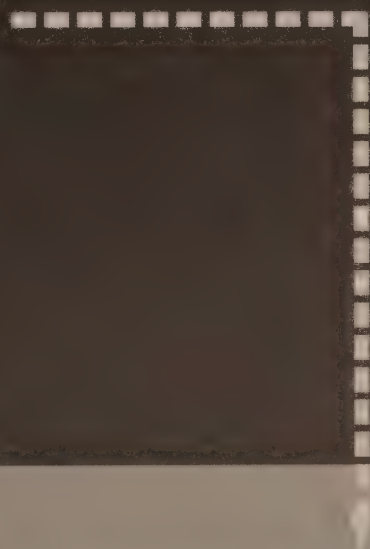

For more information, call the LIRR at 718-217-LIRR (NYC), 516-822-LIRR (Nassau), or 631-231-LIRR (Suffolk).
For NYC Transit, call 718-330-1234. And for New York Waterway, call 1-800-53-FERRY.

Duboeuf's Greatest Wine Bargains On Sale

In a recent "Tastings" article that appeared in The Wall Street Journal, wine writers

Dorothy Gaiter and John Brecher stated: "We've Said Many Times That Beaujolais May Be The Greatest Red Wine Bargain In The World." We couldn't agree more! The delicious reds of Beaujolais and pleasing Chardonnays of The Macon listed here are ample testimony. Each feature the First Prize Label indicating that each wine has won first place at the prestigious, annual Villfranche and Macon wine fairs. Monsieur Duboeuf selected these prize winning cuvees especially for Sherry-Lehmann.

First Prize Winning Label Reds	BOTTLE	CASE
* BEAUJOLAIS-VILLAGES 1999	7.49	89.88

First Prize The 1999 harvest was exceptional for the wines of Beaujolais. This fresh, new offering displays uncommon depth and richness. Its bright, lively fruit aromas and complexity make it delicious. (4412)

* CHENAS 1999	8.25	99.00
First Prize One of Beaujolais' lesser known Crus, Chenas combines power and finesse with a spicy character and floral aromas. (4505)

* REGNIE 1999	8.95	107.40
First Prize Regnie's trademark ripe red-currant, strawberry and raspberry fruit is very evident in this supple and delicious 1999. (4506)

* COTE DE BROUILLY 1999	9.95	119.40
First Prize The character of the Cote de Brouilly comes from its soil. A former volcano, the hill on which the vineyards lie is rich fertile rock. Comparatively more heady than other crus, this wine displays a predominant apricot flavor. (4525)

DUBOEUF
SUMMER SAMPLER
119.95

Twelve Bottles - Consists of one of each of the nine reds and three whites shown here bearing an asterisk(*). (6609)

First Prize Winning Label Reds	BOTTLE	CASE
* CHIROUBLES 1999	9.95	119.40

First Prize Fresh, fruit, light and supple with a charming bouquet of fresh violets, this engaging cru is one of our most popular. Chiroubles is located on a bed of granite and is at the highest altitude of all the Beaujolais crus. (4508)

* MORGON 1999	9.95	119.40
First Prize Known for having the fruit of Beaujolais and the charm of Burgundy, Morgon is a lusty, full-bodied Cru with touches of cherry, kirsch and apricot. (4407)

* JULIENAS 1999	10.49	125.88
First Prize The rich, clay soil of this popular Beaujolais produces a powerful and robust wine with a ruby red color, peach and raspberry flavors and supple charm. (4406)

* FLEURIE 1999	10.95	131.40
First Prize Fleurie is one of the finest expressions of the fruity charms of Beaujolais. It displays a very floral bouquet with hints of iris, roses and violets. Delicious peach and blackcurrant flavors add to its charm. (4531)

* ST. AMOUR 1999	12.50	150.00
First Prize Until Regnie was elevated to Cru status in 1988, St. Amour was the youngest Cru of Beaujolais. This 1998 Flower Label wine is delicate with delicious flavors of peaches and raspberries. (4413)

First Prize Winning Label Chardonnays	BOTTLE	CASE
BEAUJOLAIS BLANC 1998	7.95	95.40
First Prize Label Only 1% of all of Beaujolais wine produced is white. Georges Duboeuf crafts the best! (4455)

* MACON-VILLAGES 1998	8.49	101.88
First Prize Label Produced from 100% Chardonnay, this wine yields a fine balance of lemony fruit and acidity. Its elegance and grace are amazing. (4431)

* ST-VERAN 1998	9.95	119.40
First Prize Label Golden honey nose with tropical fruit flavors and full-body. This Chardonnay is among our most popular. (4432)

* POUILLY-FUISSE 1997	14.95	179.40
First Prize Label 1997 Pouilly Fuisse are complex wines with floral notes and hints of toasted oak that mingle with round, supple, mouthfilling fruit and crisp acidity. (4435)

Champagne Demoiselle Reserve Special of Lucas Carton

FROM ALAIN SENDERENS

Alain Senderens, the renowned chef of Paris' famed restaurant Lucas Carton, explains: "In 1993, when I met my good friend Paul-Francois Vranken, I asked him to create a special cuvee of Champagne that I would be proud to serve to the guests of Lucas Carton. After much research M. Vranken created Champagne Demoiselle Reserve Special Lucas Carton.

THE TASTE

It is a very dry Champagne that imparts a buttery flavor on the palate and it was created to be consumed with the cuisine of my beloved restaurant." (1140)

THE CIRCUS IS COMING TO TOWN!

CAPTIVITY IS HARMFUL FOR ANIMALS AND PEOPLE...

Circus animals eat, sleep, and defecate in cramped cages for most of their lives. Chained and caged animals trained with force become extremely stressed. Pushed too far by years of cruelty, animals frequently lash out against their captivity. Since 1985 over 150 people have been killed or severely injured by captive elephants.

Elephants naturally walk 20-30 miles per day, while in a circus they are always confined. Life in a circus is torturous for elephants and other wild animals as they cannot engage in natural behaviors. In the wild, animals are free to roam, hunt, play and form families. In the circus they are chained, cramped, exhausted, beaten and killed for "entertainment".

To confine an animal, having first brutally broken its spirit in order to make such a powerful animal subservient and "obedient", is immensely cruel, and in this day and age, ethically unacceptable. Captive animals are forced to perform unnatural acts through fear of their abusive trainers. No tiger would voluntarily jump through a flaming hoop. Educate your friends and family about the truth of the circus industry. Do not let your dollars contribute to the animals' pain.

Break Their Chains...

Oh No

What The Hell Were They Advertising On The Side Of That Jetski?

By Dan Rattiner

Last Sunday at Sagaponack Main Beach, sixteen men, bare chested, paddled their big long outrigger canoe – the kind you see on a set of a movie about the south seas islands – just offshore and parallel to the beach where all the bathers were sitting. It was quite a spectacle and everybody stopped what they were doing to have a look. The men paddled in unison, bellowing out a sturdy grunt each time their oars touched the water.

“What the hell is this?” somebody asked.

The answer of course is that it was advertising, a new kind. Along the side of the boat in giant letters was a single word, “Keepfit.com.” The men paddled on and soon they were out of sight.

Two days later back in Manhattan, some New York City building inspectors boarded a police boat, headed out into the Hudson and issued a ticket to a tugboat captain whose vessel was towing a barge. On the barge there was a giant sign reading “Dirtpile.com.” Turns out there’s a zoning rule in New York that prohibits ships from displaying signs visible from nearby highway overpasses. No towns in the Hamptons have such ordinances. Who’d a thought that the city would?

After receiving his ticket – the fine is $5,000 – the tugboat captain turned his vessel around and headed north up the Hudson to Dobbs Ferry. Discussions ensued between the captain and the people that hired him, lawyers were consulted and the following day, the dirtpile.com barge was back, but on the New Jersey side of the Hudson. That would be legal until New Jersey passed a law.

Although, if New Jersey was smart, since the sign only faces Manhattan, they’d pass an ordinance taxing the advertising in its nautical jurisdiction, rather than prohibiting it.

An article about this event appeared in the New York Times the next day along with a photograph of the barge and its sign, the publicity worth about $10,000. Wow. The article here in Dan’s Papers is probably worth half of that.

Well, we’ve got ads on the Internet, bi-planes towing banners, even big billboard trucks advertising Jose Cuervo on our highways. What I say is, when these sixteen big hairy chested men row through the surf to shore, let’s give them each a snort of Jack Daniel’s. Jack Daniel’s is one of this newspapers big advertisers. •

Hispanics Playing Volleyball

A Story About The Home Of The Brave And The Land Of The Free

By Dan Rattiner

It’s a tough job being a Town Supervisor. Last Friday, Jay Schneiderman the East Hampton Supervisor had to listen to a bunch of people who live in the Three Mile Harbor area complain about Hispanics playing volleyball. There’s a whole influx of Latino people who have come to the Hamptons recently. They are having fun and playing games differently from those people who’ve come before.

“We’re dealing with organized adult games on a regular basis,” one resident said (as reported in the East Hampton Star).

“People are parking haphazardly, and drinking beer and making noise all over the place,” another woman said. “This is an invasion of a different style of life. The problem could spread to other neighborhoods. People are placing bets of $50 or more on the different teams.”

One woman said that at one site they had cleared bushes and trees so that they could play. And if the neighbors called the police they would take the nets down and stow them somewhere.

Mr. Schneiderman, whose grandparents had come to this country from somewhere else, seemed dumbfounded by this. “This is the first time I’ve ever heard of this,” he said. “It sounds like there are multiple, multiple violations.”

Try reading the above account but replace volleyball with baseball and the volleyball nets with bases and baseball bats. Would that have been OK? Sounds like the public ought to build these people a couple of volleyball courts somewhere. •

YET ANOTHER PLUM ISLAND JOKE.....

Visit ToxicWorld

A New Day Of Fun Dawns At The Plum Island Animal Disease Center

By Dan Rattiner

A man named David Huxsoll has taken over as director of the Plum Island Animal Disease Center, and I think he's got a few screws loose, or maybe he's just caught up in his work and doesn't realize how odd the things he's been saying sound.

Plum Island is three miles wide and four miles long and located just off the tip of the North Fork of Long Island. In the early '50s, when the East End was a good deal farther from civilization than it is now, the federal government took over the island and put up chain link fence and barbed wire around its perimeter and opened the Animal Disease Center to study, well, animal diseases. For fifty years they have brought in goats and sheep and gotten them sick with one disease or another and then tried various medicines to see if they couldn't make them well. This is an admirable pursuit, but one in which you would want to have the veterinarians wearing rubber gloves and masks and sealed zippered white lab suits, and you wouldn't want any of these animals to be able to get off the island, hence the barbed wire and chain link fence.

In recent years they've added showers and ultraviolet ray booths. Members of the press, the only people allowed to visit Plum Island in recent years, strip down, go through this elaborate procedure and are in protected suits until they leave.

biochemical warfare research; Huxsoll said the answer was to invite in the general public.

"We should give guided tours," he said. "Maybe once a week. People don't know what we do, we want to change that."

Yeah right, people are going to line up, buy tickets, bring the kids.

At the end of the day, tired and shuffling back to your car after touring ToxicWorld, they give you a dead cat as a souvenir.

A few days after this press conference, there was an item in the papers about a dozen sick goats being brought to the island. The goats had been inoculated with a virus. I'd never before seen an item like this in the newspapers. Although, of course, now that I think about it, if the animals on the island keep dying, they've got to get new ones from somewhere. And I did wonder if the placing of this item in the paper was part of Mr. Huxsoll's new policy of openness.

Huxsoll, who arrived last week from LSU where he had headed up the pathobiology department, held a press conference. He acknowledged that in recent years, Plum Island has had an image problem. People that live on the main land nearby, now highly populated, want the facility shut down. Meanwhile, Plum Island wants to expand into

All this had come up earlier this year. Plum Island petitioned the government for permission to upgrade their bio-safety level. Currently, it's bio-safety level three, which means that the lab people there can work on animal diseases. With bio-level four, they could work on finding ways to counter biological and chemical warfare attacks from terrorists.

It has not passed anyone's notice that there is a bio-level safety five that could be gotten. This level is for research on biological chemicals that are so lethal they are not allowed into the continental United States, even for research. Two miles offshore, three miles wide and one mile long, Plum Island is the only facility in the country that could qualify for level five. Hmmm.

The fact is that Plum Island is no longer in the middle of nowhere. Fifty years have gone by, there are several hundred thousand people living on the East End. Oddly enough, the supervisor of the town of Southold, Jean Cochran has applauded Mr. Huxsoll's new position.

"If this is his philosophy, (bringing in the public) we certainly are delighted," she said.

It sounds like the words of a mayor who runs a town nearby to a factory where everybody works. A lot of the Plum Island workers live in Southold Town and successfully return home safely everyday. Although there was at one time an outbreak of hoof and mouth disease, when some deadly stuff got off the island.

I don't know, if they want to get the general public in, they'll have to do major marketing: dress some people up as cows and goats and have them hand out balloons at the front entrance. There might be a big sign over the main entrance, "Welcome To ToxicWorld, the Plum Island Animal Research And anti-Chemical Warfare Center." There could be a little snack stand where they sell hot-dogs and lemonade, soft ice-cream and churros.

At the end of the day, tired and shuffling back to your car after touring ToxicWorld, they give you a dead cat to take home as a souvenir.

And don't worry if you feel a little nauseous on the way home. It's probably nothing. •

Dune Road Redux

If At First You Don't Succeed Try Again (With $60 Million In Taxpayers $$)

By Dan Ratttiner

If ever there was a lesson as to why you shouldn't build close to the Atlantic Ocean on the beach, it's Dune Road in the village of the Hampton Dunes. It's a little morality play and it ain't pretty.

On the particular beach that I'm talking about there were by 1970 about 140 little summer homes, some of them A frames, some of them little boxes on stilts, each on 140 little quarter acre parcels of land, backing onto Dune Road and facing out across a dune to the Atlantic Ocean. These houses had plumbing, electricity and telephone but no heat or insulation. They were perfect summer places and families would come out and use them on weekends and sometimes for two or three week vacations.

Those who owned these summer homes paid taxes to Southampton Town and owned insurance policies that said that if the houses got knocked down, they would be rebuilt. They were as much of an investment to the homeowner as any other summer house built out in the Hamptons. And for the most part they were family owned and the families expected they would be handed down from generation to generation.

As a matter of fact, in the late 1960s, Suffolk County and the Town of Southampton, which collected the taxes, had embarked on a program with financial help from the federal government to protect these homes by arming the beaches against the jetties – this was during the era when protests were rampant – complaining that public monies were being spent to benefit the rich people who owned the oceanfront homes.

The project, with about half the jetties done, came to a halt. All of the jetties were in on the eastern side between Quogue and Westhampton. Nothing had been done between Westhampton and the Moriches inlet where these hundred houses all stood along with many others.

I'm sure all of you have seen photographs of all the houses that were swept into the sea between 1980 and 1995. All together, there were 120 of them, side by side, and they went into the sea at the rate of ten or fifteen a year.

These were the 120 homes to which I am referring and as they went all that remained was the sand, the building sites where the homes once were. A surveyor could have gone out there and had a field day, marking up the quarter acre lots on the sand amidst the wreckage

...and if the storms come and the surf comes, they are a village in danger, not just a bunch of homeowners...

with a series of stone jetties. They would stick out about a hundred yards into the Atlantic at quarter mile intervals.

It seemed like a good idea at the time, but about half way through the project, many of the local people began demonstrating and marching of all these homes. It was as if all this land was just recently sub-divided building sites on the ocean waiting to be built upon, just as they had been forty years before.

The cause of this, it was soon determined, were the jetties themselves. The drift of sand, which moves from east to west, had been caught up in the new jetties as if they had been caught up in the teeth of a comb. There was no sand anymore to replenish the beach in front of these hundred homes immediately to the west, and as a result the sea had taken them.

In the late 1980's and early 1990's, I spoke at length to many of these homeowners. The power lines were gone, the concrete road had been washed away, the broken houses that remained had been vandalized and burglarized, and scavengers had picked up the few pieces of furniture that remained from those homes that had fallen down and had then been broken by the surf. They were angry homeowners. They had called their lawyers. With the surf washing across their property twice a day at high tide, the insurance companies were balking at rebuilding. All the investments, hopes and dreams, it seemed, were gone.

In 1992, Mayor Anton of Westhampton Beach invited me to accompany him aboard one of those ducks, an amphibious military vehicle that goes down the sand into water and then motors through the surf. We passed where those houses had been and now there wasn't even any sand. It was simply an inlet connecting the ocean and Moriches Bay with the water surging one way and then the other, depending upon the tide. Those parcels of land that people had owned were now under water and it seemed to me that perhaps they would be lost forever.

But then an astonishing thing happened. Where 140 homeowners with 140 lawyers had been unable to make a dent, one man using another strategy, did. His name was Gary Vegliante and he did some research into municipalities and villages and found that if all these people involved in this underwater piece of land banded together and argued that in the absence of any maritime or underwater laws the property they owned still existed, they could be considered property owners and therefore entitled to form an incorporated village. They did incorporate at a cost of just a few hundred dollars. And though you might think that the incorporated village of Hamptons Dunes would hold its first meeting in a rowboat anchored above the property, it didn't. The meeting was held on western Long Island near New York City, at the permanent homes of one of the residents.

Armed with these legal documents, which showed that an entire village was inundated and now underwater, the mayor approached the Federal Governor and suddenly tens of millions of dollars of government money became available.

Saving the Incorporated Village of Westhampton Dunes started with a two mile long steel fence, thirty feet deep, that the Army Core of Engineers pounded into the water where the land used to be. Hundreds of tons of sand followed and within two years those properties were back. People that had given up and had sold their quarter acres got only forty or fifty thousand dollars per parcel. But those who had stayed, now almost a gen-

Billy Joel Returns

Pianoman Is At Southampton With Other Celebs To Help Stop Millstone

By Janna Cord

It was just like old times last Saturday night when Billy Joel and Christie Brinkley were back together in the Hamptons, but this time it was only for an evening. They joined forces at Southampton High School to celebrate the STAR Foundation's first annual "Summer STAR Series." Joel had agreed to perform a Master Class - an evening of "questions, answers...and a little music," as the program explained, to help raise awareness, and of course money, for Brinkley's cause, the closure of the Millstone Nuclear Reactor in Waterford, Connecticut.

STAR (Standing for the Truth About Radiation Foundation) is a grassroots organization concerned with the toxic effects of radiation. They played a major role in the closure of the High Flux Beam Reactor at the Brookhaven National Laboratory, and have now narrowed their keen focus on closing the pernicious Millstone plant. Riddled with numerous safety and pollution violations, Millstone sits just eleven miles from the East End of Long Island and, according to many, is an accident waiting to happen. Due to the isolated nature of the South Fork, coupled with the limited accessibility of the two major egress routes, the Hamptons in particular would be hard to evacuate in any sort of disaster. To vacate the area within the federally stipulated time of a nuclear accident would be all but impossible. When Joel became aware of the Millstone issue he immediately answered the call to action. "We not only have the right, but the responsibility to ensure that our communities are safe from the dangers inherent to having a nuclear reactor so close to our homes," Joel declared. Additionally, his life long love of the island and the fact that his daughter still resides in the another, they gladly posed for photos and chatted amongst themselves. The performance itself was kicked off with an explanation of STAR and its mission, a top ten list of reasons to support the Foundation, followed by some brief remarks from Andrew Cuomo, and finally the welcoming of Joel himself on stage. His appearance was met with an enthusiastic roar. To warm the audience up, Joel began by playing a "fielder's choice" about his baby grand, then the floor was opened to questions. There were six roaming volunteers with microphones, who Joel directed. Joel gave some brief direction on how the evening was to work. He advised that he was there to "educate and enlighten people about the job I do," then he pleaded, "but please don't make your questions a two or three-parter because it's not fair because other people may have questions." Joel seemed lithe and ready for an evening of fun.

The first question came from a twenty five year fan of Joel's who rued that he had seen Joel perform many times over the years, but had never heard him play one of his favorites, "Turn Around" from his Cold Spring Harbor Album. "Is it that you don't like the song?" the man asked. "Well, you touched on it," Joel replied, "and you were kind of hinting would I do it, well, uh, no." After

...one asked "What's a Real Estate Novelist?" referring to the character... in Joel's hit "Pianoman."

Hamptons were the ultimate impetuous that brought about his involvement with the issue. To that end, Joel consented to make this appearance on STAR's behalf.

With the Southampton High School auditorium brimming with over 1,000 adoring fans, the evening began backstage with the swift and glamorous arrival of Joel's ex, Christie Brinkley, along with their daughter Alexa, her current husband Peter Cooke and Joel's girlfriend Channel 12 news reporter Trish Bergen. At ease with one the laughter subsided, he added, "but thank you for asking. I've never done that song and probably never will." Then he was on to the next. Questions ran the gamut from technical inquiries to general interest, but most revolved around deciphering the meaning of lyrics or identities of characters in his songs. Predictably, one asked, "what's a Real Estate Novelist?" referring to the character Paul in Joel's best selling hit "Pianoman." Joel exposed him as a realtor who used to hang out in a bar that he played in who was always talking about the great American novel he was planning to write. Whether he ever got around to actually doing it, Joel had no idea.

Most questions were met with witty and rapid-fire responses. Joel's engaging manner and honest dialogue kept the audience glued like flies to a no pest strip. The laughs rarely died down and the one liners kept coming. When he was asked if the reprise of the "Allentown" theme at the end of "Where's the Orchestra" was just a cute trick, Joel snapped back, "are you accusing me of being cute?" After a lengthy explanation he eventually chalked it up to "symphonic reiteration," a device used in music where you bring back a part of an earlier piece to tie a group of work together. He also mentioned that he felt "Allentown" was particularly appropriate because of its overall message of disillusionment. He admitted he really liked the dichotomy of the up beat music and the depressing lyric in "Allentown" and speculated "maybe it's because I'm a manic depressive." He then advised any potential songwriters in the audience that if they did have manic depression, "it's very useful in songwriting, so put it to work."

As expected, fans from his hometown of Hicksville attended, ready to relive the old days. One such woman, after engaging in a geography lesson with Joel regarding various points of interest in Hicksville, was in fact moved to tears when asking him a question about her favorite song, "Honesty." And, as people will often assume rules apply to all but them, questions began turning into "two and three-parters," but Joel took it in stride and castigated kindly and with humor. Joel's old friend Chevy Chase was in attendance, lending his support, and when he stood up to ask a question, made light of the situation by musing, "Yeah, hi. I'm from Yaphank and I have an eleven part question." The first was "What's your favorite piano?" and he ended his monologue with a review of his questions, the last being, "Does this place have a men's room?" Clearly the crowd adored their interaction.

Other interesting moments included a young girl asking Joel (in a dreaded two-parter) if it was easy to write a song, and if he listened to his own music, to which he answered, "No, it's very hard to write a song, but that's what makes it good." And to the second part he admitted he didn't program his own music when he was sitting around at home, but if he is listening to the radio and one of his songs comes on, the volume goes immediately to ten and he sings loudly along. He said that this habit can be especially embarrassing when he is in his car and is recognized by a fellow motorist.

He also spoke briefly about some of his successes and failures. He mentioned that his single "Only the Good Die Young," was actually dying on the charts until several Catholic institutions, like Seton Hall College, decided to ban it. It was then that he discovered "if you want to sell something in America, ban it." That negative attention sent "Only the Good Die Young" roaring back to life on the charts, landing it in the top five for many weeks. He even contemplated calling the archdiocese and asking them if they could possibly ban his next album. "Honesty" was another single that was met with mixed reviews stateside, but for some reason became an enormous hit in France. At one point Joel thought he could even be the next Jerry Lewis, that is until he wrote a song in French that was an enormous bomb with the French.

After two and a half hours of uninterrupted interaction, Joel was ready to call it a night. "I'm starving," he complained, "I'm wasting away up here." The relentless audience pleaded for one last question, to which he conceded. Then, the evening finally ended with Joel playing his signature song "Pianoman" and sharing a few last words about closing Millstone. The audience members, who were not quite satiated, reluctantly bid Joel farewell with a lengthy standing ovation. Fans will surely be waiting impatiently for Joel's next appearance in the Hamptons, but will have plenty of good memories, and lots to talk about, after last Saturday night's special performance. •

Angels From The Sky

Training For Pararescuers At Sea By Helicopter At Westhampton Air National Guard

By Janet Berg

After seeing the movie "The Perfect Storm," many moviegoers feel the most interesting and fascinating part of the film are the characters who portray our own local pararescue men of the Air National Guard from Westhampton.

During their attempt to rescue a Japanese sailor almost 300 miles off the coast of Long Island, the local helicopter crew was forced to ditch when it was unable to perform an aerial refueling from a C-130 airplane with 120 mph winds and 100 foot waves.

To attempt such a feat boggles the mind of any civilian who may sit in the comfortable dark theater, munching on a large bag of popcorn and licorice sticks.

You may wonder what type of person can endure such a test, so I interviewed the pilot, Lt. Col. Dave Rulova, THE INDIVIDUAL:

As I shook the hand of the pilot, dressed in his camouflage fatigues, it was in my mind that I was shaking the hand of a movie hero, but he quickly led me to believe that he does not think of himself that way. "Nor does my wife or any of my three children, David, Natalie and Christina. They're hardly impacted by this at all," he said, as if it's just part of the job.

When asked how he summons his courage, he said, "I took after my Sicilian grandfather, who was mentally tough and a real 'survivor.'"

As a kid growing up in Islip, his peers knew him as having "no fear."

This intuitive feeling that he would not get hurt stayed with him, and he attributes much of his inner strength from the "individuality" he learned as a wrestler and as an ocean lifeguard.

Before he came on full time in 1988, as an officer and pilot, Rulova finished his four-year degree, and became a "PJ" or parajumper for five years in 1977.

"Mmmm, a typical day of training?" he repeated as he reflected back to the '70's and to his routine at Lackland Air Force Base in San Antonio, Texas. "Well, in order to even get 'out' of the building, you had to do fifteen chinups, and to get back quarter-mile sprints, and the long, slow distance runs, interrupted throughout by calisthenics (up to thirteen miles). Anything you didn't do within the perimeters, was considered a penalty point.

"After running, we'd get a twenty minute break and then we'd swim free style and then with fins, and then the underwater swims the length of fifty yard pools. The swim duration would begin with approximately one mile and end at five miles per day.

"Then there was lunch. Of course, we had to do the chinups and the pushups and then go down to chow hall with the rope tied on you, eat your lunch, and get back out and grab your rope, run back do your pushups, go back inside, change into your swimgear, and then run down to the pool with the rope on you.

"Then we'd do our swims and also what's called 'water harassment,' where in plain English, the instructors would 'beat the hell out of you underwater,' trying to make you panic and go to the surface.

"So, if you and I were buddies, we'd have a link between us and we'd only have one mask and snorkel, and I'd go up and suck air, then I'd give you the snorkel. But the instructor would come and grab you and choke you. Then I'd come back down, shove it in your mouth and get underneath the two of you and push you both up above the surface so you can breath, then I'd come back down and I'd take the snorkel and at that point you would have to save me."

"...what is called 'water harassment,' in plain English, the instructors try to beat the hell out of you underwater, trying to make you panic..."

"in" the building, you had to do sixty pushups."

Without straining his voice, he described the huge blocks he had to do the pushups on. "The constant exercise was a daily ritual we all had to do, and once outside, we had to run everywhere we went with giant, heavy ropes. As the team dwindled down (there's a 93% dropout rate), obviously the rope got heavier. We then had to wrap it around us and carry it with us. But, Rulova always kept a tone of accomplishment, rather than one of complaint.

And we had to run daily, three different types of runs, the pace miles (six miles), the timed

The idea is to 'eliminate.' They want you to quit. It's much more psychological than physical. The men need the mental ability to push themselves. They don't want a guy who is thrown 1000 miles off shore in twenty foot swells, four o'clock in the morning who will "freak out." The training allows you to maintain your composure and do what has to be done on a minute to minute and second to second basis."

On that fateful night, that would become known as "The Storm of the Century," the forty-three year old pilot admits, "we got caught with our pants down. We didn't know the forecast prior to our launching. Today, it would be highly unlikely that a storm could sneak up on the rescue crew, due to the improvement of computer technology. It's simply a point and a click away to making safer decisions," the pilot ruefully added.

Ruvola described himself as being on a "spiritual journey" with all the events that have taken place since 1991 until now.

THE TEAMWORK: I spoke with Chief Master Sergeant Alan Manuel, who is head of the Pararescue Section of the 106th Rescue Wing of the Air National Guard. He said, "The most unique thing about it is that it teaches a young man to operate 'solo,' as well as in a 'team.'" It's two opposite ends of the stick, to listen and take orders and then switch gears and almost instantaneously operate as a unit. Then you're on your own making a quick decision that could affect other people.

"It takes self-discipline and integrity – when no one is looking – because it's the "right" thing to do."

There are twenty nine pararescuers at Gabreski Airport in Westhampton, which is the only search and rescue unit on the East Coast. Unlike the Coast Guard, they train for Combat Rescue and the Coast Guard trains for PeaceTime Rescue. If there's a rescue situation beyond their range, the pararescuers are called in, as they have the ability to refuel in midair.

Chief Master Manuel said, "The Parachute

Chasing The Ghost Of J.P. Morgan

Author Jean Strouse Talks About Her Work At Friday At Five Lecture

By Ben Amato

When Jean Strouse went looking for J. Pierpont Morgan, she expected to write the biography of a scoundrel, a robber baron with tremendous wealth and extravagant tastes. What she discovered after fifteen years of research was a complex, patriotic visionary, who used Europe's wealth and cultural traditions to improve the United States.

"He harvested the best of Europe's past for America's future," is how Ms. Strouse phrased it, at the Fridays at Five lecture last week. Behind the Hampton Library, beneath a canopy of lush green leaves, Ms. Strouse described this "colossus" of the financial world to the hundred or so in the audience.

As a young man, J.P. Morgan "brought European money to the United States to build railroads." He was the organizing force behind U.S. Steel, our nation's first billion dollar industrial giant. "When Thomas Edison first lit the lightbulb, J.P. was right behind him," because as Ms. Strouse explained, he was fascinated by new technologies. He created General Electric, International Harvester and united our nation with vast railroad empires. From the age of twenty five until his death in 1913, J.P. Morgan was our nation's unofficial central banker who stabilized America's money market.

In chapter one of her best-selling biography Morgan, Ms. Strouse writes;

"When a panic started in New York in 1907, he led teams of bankers to stop it. For a moment in 1907, he was a national hero. Crowds cheered as he made his way down Wall Street, and world political leaders saluted his statesmanship with awe. The next moment, however, the exercise of that much power by one private citizen horrified a nation of democrats and revived America's long-standing distrust of concentrated wealth. Morgan's critics charged that he had made huge profits on the rescue operation—even that he had engineered the crisis in order to scoop up assets at fire-sale prices."

With a biographer's "pathological curiosity," as Ms. Strouse confessed, she spent over ten years searching for this greedy robber baron. And she found him, in a young J.P. Morgan, who paid $300 for a substitute to evade active duty in the Civil War and then went on to set up risky, reckless war profiteering deals. Later, under his father's more stable hand, Morgan learned to line his own pockets with more "long term, patient investments," realizing that what was in the nation's interest was in his own.

It was obvious to the audience that Ms. Strouse did not believe that he was just a voracious financial predator, out to "swallow the sun," as his critics charge. She was fonder of J.P. Morgan, every year, funneling the wealth of Europe into the giant corporations and monopolies that propelled America into a leadership role in the industrialized world. The other three months belonged to a private Morgan, the art collector with an "inquisitive sensuous nature," buying vast collections of art and bringing them to America.

The public J.P. Morgan stood as a colossus, promoting his own financial empire, firmly believing that what was good for his interests was good for the country. But Ms. Strouse discovered a different Morgan, through the private letters and diaries written by those closest to him. Here, J. Pierpont is a man racked by depression and self doubt. He worried that he would be remembered as a monster, who ruined the lives of workers and farmers for his own profits. He suffered through bouts of delusion and despair and then had outbursts of hyper-activity, driven to close that next deal, buy that next painting. "It was heartbreaking for someone who accomplished so much," said Ms. Strouse. "He always had to push it one step further."

It took a stroke of luck five years ago to shine this biographer's eye towards the inner Morgan. In the back of a closet in an apartment on East 69th Street in Manhattan, a hidden door in the rear of a closet was opened. Locked away for over twenty years were boxes of letters, photographs and diaries of Morgan's favorite daughter Louisa. "These were detailed letters describing what happened...a vivid, close-up picture of J.P. Morgan.....private letters and diaries are the best source you can find," and this treasure trove allowed Ms. Strouse to understand the man, with his two wives, several mistresses and companions, children, friends and foes.

"Just when I wanted to be finished," Ms. Strouse lamented, a whole new quest lay out before her. She would travel to Europe, England and outside of Florence, to track down sources and discover new paths into the spirit of J.P. Morgan. It was on one of these trips that she realized the significance of Belle DeCosta Green, a "22 year old" clerk he hired to "tame" his wild array of rare books and art into an organized, cataloged collection. She grew to become the first director and "the soul of the Morgan Library," living a life in the "cosmopolitan world" of the elite. She took charge of his purchases, forcing him to buy within systematic channels, adding style and the art collector and builder of cultural empires. He formed the Metropolitan Museum of Art and the Museum of Natural History. His goal was to "bring all the beautiful things in the world" to America, according to Ms. Strouse, and then upon his death, "open his hands and let them go," so they may be shared and used to inspire American tastes and imaginations. He invested more than half his vast wealth in art, $900 million by today's standards, "collecting for America," as Ms. Strouse put it to her enraptured audience. "J. Pierpont felt it was important to bring them to America."

With the envious look of a keen shopper herself, Ms. Strouse talked of J.P. Morgan's "voracious buying." As a workaholic, Morgan would be the "the Napoleon of Wall Street" for nine months of elegance to his collections.

This "chatty, frank, indiscreet" young woman with luxurious tastes always wore a gown, jewels and hat to work, and had "love affairs with the world's top art historians," confided the suddenly chatty Ms. Strouse. But Belle always looked out for her boss, "the big chief," making sure he paid a fair market price for his masterpieces.

It is the undiscovered road into the past that drives a biographer on, so when Ms. Strouse traveled deeper into Belle's history, startling revelations appeared. The twenty-two year old clerk was really twenty-six when hired by Morgan. Her "dusty" complexion was not a result of her Portuguese ancestry, as she stated on her resume, for she was actually a light skinned black woman and the daughter of Richard Theo Greener, the first black man to graduate from Harvard University. He later became the Dean of Harvard in 1865, and then served as the U.S. Counsel to Vladivostok, during the 1890s. Instead of being proud of such glorious heritage, her letters reveal worries about "passing" as white. She often described how she felt at all white parties. "Like a huckleberry in a bowl of milk," is the phrase she used, paraphrasing a famous line from Booker T. Washington.

A listener in the audience asked if J.P. Morgan would have hired her if he had know Belle was black. Ms. Strouse replied that she hoped and thought so because he "cherished ability, energy and good ideas." His follow-up question was if Belle DeCosta Green would be the subject of her next book, Ms. Strouse replied, "How about a screenplay."

"After fifteen years of reading other people's mail, I am careful what I put on paper," Ms. Strouse said, as she brought Fridays at Five to an end. The audience applauded and lined up to speak with her, as she signed copies of her bestseller Morgan. All were glad that Ms. Strouse decided to put her thoughts on J.P. Morgan on to a page, for her discoveries about this giant from America's past, offers insights into the present state of affairs and our future.

By Jerry Cimisi

Leonard Marks, of Manhattan and Amagansett, seems to have led a dichotomous life. As an attorney he has represented the Beatles, Billy Joel, Madonna, Eddie Murphy and other high profile names in entertainment. Marks was also a Watergate consultant in the '70s. In the '90s he successfully represented the families of people who had been unknowingly subjected to experiments with plutonium at a hospital in Rochester in the 1950s. Then there was the OJ Simpson case. But in the midst of this worldly life he has in addition edited a book on meditation with a Jainist monk, is president of the Temple of Understanding, the oldest interfaith church in the country, and is currently conducting meditation sessions every Sunday morning this summer at his house in Amagansett.

"I'm trying to do more of this type of work than legal work now," said Marks. "I see self healing meditation as being of tremendous help to people. Even people who have come just a few times say it has helped them physically and emotionally."

Marks grew up in the Bronx and Manhattan. He attended Yale Law School. In 1970 he and two other attorneys founded the firm Gold, Farrell and Marks (last year it merged with Rubin Baum). In the early '80s the firm took as clients the Beatles, who were trying to get all of the royalties due them from EMI Music Worldwide, the company that owns Capitol Records, the label that launched the Beatles on their astounding career. By that time the Beatles as a group were no more; they had disbanded in 1970 (as if an exact chronological ending to the '60s) and John Lennon had been murdered (in 1980); his widow, Yoko Ono became party to the suit. John Eastman, brother of Paul's

Leonard Marks, the Dalai Lama and Richard Gere

wife Linda, had done work with Marks' firm and had recommended its services to the Beatles.

"It involved a lot of international litigation," said Marks, "in London and Manhattan. The case went well into the '80s. In the end we won a $300 million judgement for the three surviving Beatles and Yoko Ono."

After the Beatles' case, the '90s also saw Marks trying to right the wrongs done to the finances of another rock icon, Billy Joel. "His bother-in-law had been his manager and had taken a lot of Joel's money secretly."

Marks won an $8 million judgement for Joel. Other entertainers he has represented in contract and management litigations are Michael Jackson, Whitney Houston and the Bee Gees.

Marks was also involved in representing the estate of Willem de Kooning after the artist's death. Relatives of Elaine de Kooning, the artist's former wife who had died some years earlier were trying to claim some of the estate, even though the couple had been divorced for decades. The relatives of Elaine de Kooning were the losers in this case.

In fact, Marks' clients seem the list of a lawyer's fantasy. He represented the Rothschilds in France, "to keep another company from using their name for wine in America."

And if Marks' was not one of the lawyers employed in "The Trial of the Century," a.k.a. "The People v. Orenthal James Simpson," the seasoned attorney led Daniel Petrocelli, who was prosecuting OJ in the civil case to some damning information – which, Marks said, he had presented to the prosecution in the infamous criminal trial, but the information was ever used.

Marks said, "I had a friend who was writing a book for Kato Kaelin about OJ...." (For those whose memories are short – after all Simpson was acquitted in the criminal trial in October, 1995 – Kato Kaelin was a somewhat disarming and quirky character whose role at the time could best be described as OJ's houseboy.)

Marks related that his friend had heard the following story from Kato Kaelin: "One night, about two weeks before the murders, Kato and OJ were watching a sexy movie. OJ told Kato that he had been secretly following his former wife and watching her have sex with other men."

Marks thought this was a more than pertinent bit of information that the prosecution should have. He spoke with prosecutors Marcia Clark and Christopher Darden on the phone. He flew out to Los Angeles to meet with prosecutors working with Clark and Darden and gave them seventeen hours of tapes of Kato Kaelin giving details about his life with OJ.

"At this point," said Marks, "they were looking to get Kato back on the stand." But, to Marks' astonishment, "they didn't use any of this stuff." Marks added he felt prosecutors Clark and Darden did not do a very good job. Though he gives the opposite assessment to Daniel Petrocelli, the attorney who represented the Brown family in the civil case against Simpson. Marks met with Petrocelli in Manhattan and gave him the information he had given Clark and Darden.

"It was about nine months before the civil case started. Petrocelli used the information. He did a fantastic job." Simpson lost the civil case and had to sell his house and other possessions in order to pay the judgement against him.

Marks was also on the periphery of the OJ Simpson matter when he advised Faye Resnick on how to give a deposition. Resnick had been a close friend of Nicole Simpson. Marks said Resnick had said that shortly before the murders she had had a phone conversation with OJ and he had told her he was willing to remarry Nicole. Nicole and OJ had been dating each other, but Nicole had told Simpson she did not want to get back together with him.

"Resnick said OJ told her he was going to kill Nicole."

Resnick had been infamous with her drug problems and had been in the hospital for a drug-related cause at the time of Nicole Simpson's murder. Marks said, "When she learned her friend had been murdered she told people in the hospital that OJ had told her he was going to kill Nicole. Nobody had mentioned Simpson to her, only that Nicole had been killed."

In the 1990s Marks represented twelve Rochester families who claimed the government had subjected family members without their consent to experimental doses of plutonium at the University of Rochester Hospital in the 1950s. In late 1996, Marks won a settlement of $4.8 million.

Then there is what many would call the "other side" of Leonard Marks: In 1978, with Jainist monk Gurudev Chitrabhanu, Marks edited a book, Realize What You Are, the Dynamics of Jain Meditation. Jainism follows the practice of "ashima," which, is living in such a manner to do the least harm to every living creature. As a faith Jainism is very old, with its beginnings going back to circa 800 B.C.

Marks said, "I was doing a law case for some fellow and he was meeting with Chitrabhanu and he suggested I meet with him, so I did. It was about 1973. I found the meditation he guided me through took me to a much higher level, I was much calmer. It gave me different ideas about time and place and observing myself, using breathing. About three years ago I went to his son's wedding in India. It was really something. There were about 2,000 people there, all vegetarian. Chitrabhanu had taken Prime Minister Indira Gandhi through meditation, especially helping her when he son was killed in a plane crash."

In What Does It Mean to Be Human? a collection of essays edited by Frederic Franck (a dentist who had worked with Albert Schweitzer in the Congo), Marks writes about his own important transformations: "As a New York trial lawyer and a former federal prosecutor my focus was on advocacy and aggressive argument until I met an Indian Jain and a former monk. After a few weeks I felt more relaxed and began to come to terms with painful things in my experience and decided to join - why not? - a small group on a trip to India..."

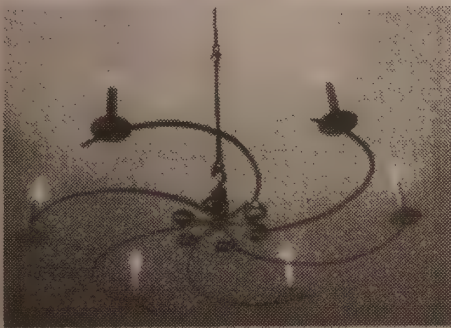

Marks had an epiphany on a climb up Mt. Palitana. Before the three hour climb, the group was asked to focus, with each step, on a question each felt pertinent to him or her. For Marks it was the question of how he could release the love within himself. At one point during the climb he was struck by light and saw auras about people, plants and stones - and heard a whisper: "You are asking the wrong question. Everything is the expression of divine love. Just see, just be."

Marks goes on to relate a story about some boys who wanted to embarrass an elder. One boy holds a live bird behind his back. The boys ask the elder preview: e. lynn harris at guild hall

By Joan Zandell

How does a handsome, male African-American computer salesman become a best-selling, award winning, openly bi-sexual African American writer? The real life story of E. Lynn Harris is a rags to riches tale with an interesting twist. Apparently, when you actually become who you really are, and do what you were really meant to do, the world opens up and you are rewarded. Some might call it accepting your destiny. Certainly that's what all the self-help books say, isn't it? Well, in the case of E. Lynn Harris, writing about who he really is has turned out to be his own personal truth.

Harris grew up in Little Rock, Arkansas, the only son of an unwed factory worker mother. In 1977 he graduated from the University of Arkansas where he became the school's first black male cheerleader as well as the school's first black yearbook editor. In college, he hid his bi-sexuality from his classmates. This trend continued through his first job as an IBM rep.

In 1983, however, something in E. Lynn Harris began to change. Perhaps it was precipitated by his fortuitous meeting with Maya Angelou, who was speaking at a corporate conference. He realized that he wanted to be a writer and he shared this secret with her. She encouraged him to "write something everyday", even if it was only one word.

The result was his first book called, Invisible Life, a semi-autobiographical adventure novel about a black, bi-sexual lawyer. When the book was rejected by twelve publishers, Harris decided to self-publish, and recognizing that his audience were African-American women, he started selling it through beauty salons. Women were buying his books for their friends and their mothers. As fate would have it, a copy was purchased and read by an editor at Doubleday and the rest, as they say, is history.

That first novel was published by Doubleday in 1994 as an original paperback with a first printing

By Joan Zandell

On Saturday evening at the opening night of LOVE, JANIS: The Songs, The Letters, The Soul of Janis Joplin at the Bay Street Theatre, the air sizzled with excitement and anticipation. Among the luminaries in the audience were Pulitzer Prize winning playwright Edward Albee, actress and singer Julie Andrews, actors Eli Wallach and Anne Jackson, composer/lyricist/performers Adolph Green and Betty Comden, playwright Joe Pintauro, writer and producer Lynda La Plante, and philanthropist Perdita de Schafner. The founder of Bay Street Cybil Christopher and her co-founder Stephen Hamilton were in attendance. As the lights began to dim, you could feel the expectation grow.

The very first number, Piece of My Heart, an old Janis standby, will have you up and out of your chair, and clapping your hands. And that is just the beginning of the evening. The two Janis' who portray the two sides of Janis Joplin, will tear at your heart strings and just when you think you've had enough, they'll slam you with another number that will make you think you've died and gone to rock n' roll heaven.

In LOVE, JANIS, the character Janis says at the end of Act I, "I walked up to the front of the stage to set up the microphone. I raised the mike up to my mouth and the whole audience applauded! Too much! A girl yelled out, 'Janis Joplin lives!' Now you can't argue with that!"

In real life, as in the play LOVE, JANIS, before she can even utter a word, the audience's heart is in Janis' hands. She sang their pain, their thoughts, their hopes and dreams. Men thought her totally sexy. It was the first time a female vocalist appeared to be so utterly and unapologetically comfortable in her own skin. By simply drinking Southern Comfort she popularized it. Her performances and her way of life made rock n' roll history.

LOVE, JANIS is the story of Janis Joplin's rise to fame as told by two Janis'. One is the young, vulnerable, sensitive and lonely Janis who struggles to assert her individuality in a world fraught with people trying to make her fit into a mold she isn't meant for. She wants so desperately to be loved and to belong, but simply can't seem to find her niche - until she starts singing with Big Brother and the Holding Company. At that moment as she performs, it would seem, Janis finally comes home to herself. She sends touching letters to her family talking about her hopes and dreams of becoming a star as well as her doubts. "I can always go back to school in the fall if things don't work out." We see her struggle with her fears the only way this gifted twenty-something-year-old knows how. By using alcohol and drugs to numb her pain and apprehension. She rises like the phoenix out of the ashes of a wounded dreamer into the full-blown exhaustion of a road weary star.

The second Janis, the public persona, the singer, the performer, the tough yet tender gal from Texas who hated her high school class because they'd rejected her, the Southern Comfort swilling, pot smoking, heroin using, freedom loving, funny, fast talking, smoky voiced, fearlessly sexual blues singer is the other side of this vulnerable, complexly creative individual, who changed the way that we would perceive women in the music industry forever.

LOVE, JANIS exists because Janis Joplin's

review: always... patsy cline

By Vania Morpurgo

One of the most memorable productions in the Hamptons this season can be seen at an intimate off-Broadway style storefront theater in Montauk.

Montauk Theatre Productions has done it again! Founder, director, producer, actress Anita Brown never fails to create magic—blending humor with deeply affecting nostalgia, and this outstanding production of Ted Swindley's touching rendition of the brief but deeply moving real life bond between Country Western singer, Patsy Cline and her most adoring fan, would make the audience of even the most sophisticated theater stand up and cheer "Bravo."

Assisted by Bobcats Band members, Tamer Tewfik on keyboard, Greg Steinmetz on drums, and guest artist Larry Hunter on guitar, actress Kirsten Becker woos her audience with a constant flow of deeply heart-felt songs. There is a sadness in her eyes that moves inward as she sings songs of damaged love in a melodic, upbeat way.

As Patsy Cline, Ms. Becker assumes a persona that is both invitingly warm and hauntingly legendary. Her voice, so much like Patsy Cline's that it would fool most loyal fans, evokes the genuine warmth of the all too short-lived star.

Her spirited comedic counterpart and instant fan and best friend, Louise Seger, jauntily played by Anita Brown, tells the story through flashbacks while sipping coffee and doing all the little natural things she does when she's home alone.

Anita Brown is both charmingly eccentric and humorously spirited in her portrayal of the newly divorced Louise Seger while her character lights up the dullness of her ordinary life with tender memories which bring Patsy Cline to life again and again singing the songs associated with each memory.

Louise Seger seems to draw comfort from the nostalgic reminiscences of the legendary friend she bonded with so unexpectedly and deeply and lost so soon in a tragic plane crash.

There is a lack of sentimentality that makes the dynamics of the friendship that much more touching. Anita Brown infuses her character with a bitter tenderness that reaches deep inside the hidden corners of the heart.

Yes, this is a play about feelings, and what can strum the chords of the heart more than the emotions of song. Twenty-four of the most feeling songs ever sung by Patsy Cline weave the story from place to place as Louise Seger moves along in the tender comforts of nostalgia.

Director Ilona Vellios staged the show with utmost versatility—changing Patsy Cline's costumes with the fluidity of memory while Louise Seger's remembrances shift from place to place in a magical sifting through the passages of time. The supporting musicians remain still in their shadows as the lights fade out at the end of each song only to brighten on Louise Seger while she reaches for yet another comforting remembrance.

Ilona Vellios' direction is subtle and magical, involving the audience in an interactive upbeat ending of a first act with hand clapping and song. Under her flawless directorial baton, the scene of the Grand Ole Opry comes to life.

As music director, Tamer Tewfik spins his own kind of magic at the keyboard. His vocal backup on one of the songs adds another dimension to an already rich performance.

Costumes play an important role in the sequence of memory, place and mood and costume consultant, Mary Ellen Winston should be given special applause for an outstanding job.

Lighting and stage settings by Greg Steinmetz are genuinely atmospheric and his sensitive, well-timed lighting is a major player in establishing the subtle nuances of a play set in memory.

Chris Pfund and Quantum Sound are responsible for the professional quality of the sound production, which this nostalgic piece relies on.

Perhaps the most touching moment of the play is the sequence of encores that Anita Brown, as the character of Louise Seger, spiritedly engages the audience in. The reprise of cherished memories will never be stilled for Patsy Cline's most intimate of all friends...Louise Seger, who will always see her as "the sister I never knew I had."

Performances at Montauk Theatre Productions will run from July 25-30, August 1-6 at 8:30 p.m.

Call for reservations: 631/668-5656

review: american musical theater at guild hall

By Jan Silver

The dry wit, sophistication and charm of Noel Coward graced the John Drew Theater at Guild Hall on Sunday evening thanks to Lee Davis, Patricia Watt and five luminous performers. For more than two hours the gentle melodies, romantic ballads, and/or tongue-twisting satiric lyrics of the British-born master illuminated the East Hampton stage.

This was the opening program in the American Musical Theater series produced by Mr. Davis and Ms. Watt for Guild Hall this summer. This Sunday, Broadway performers KT Sullivan and Lee Roy Reams sing and dance selections from musicals written by Arthur Laurents including Gypsy and

West Side Story.

Noel Coward is a touchstone of twentieth-century performing arts. Born in 1899, he was writing and singing by age eight. As a playwright, screenwriter, lyricist, composer and actor, he created many popular hits including the movie Brief Encounter, the operetta Bitter Sweet, and such plays as Blithe Spirit and Private Lives. He wrote the theater pieces that made Gertrude Lawrence, Bea Lillie and himself stars on both sides of the Atlantic.

The evening's festivities began when international cabaret star Steve Ross and leading Broadway musical arranger Peter Howard shared one piano to play a medley of Coward songs. Then accomplished theater critic/historian Lee Davis started a brief narrative of Coward's life as the songs, shows and Cowardian bon mots took center stage.

The Coward tunes most familiar to younger audiences are probably the ballads "Someday I'll Find You" from Private Lives and "I'll See You Again" from Bitter Sweet, but his intensely rhymed verse-songs such as "I Went to a Marvelous Party," "Mrs. Worthington," "Mad About the Boy," "A Bar on the Piccola Marina" and "Mad Dogs and Englishman" are classics that American lyricist Alan Jay Lerner possibly emulated in "Why Can't A Woman Be More Like A Man" or "The Rain In Spain" from My Fair Lady.

The evening's performers enchanted the Coward-devoted house. Steve Ross is a Coward and Cole Porter specialist. The multi-syllable lyrics of the verse-songs rolled "trippingly" off his tongue (sometimes a little too fast to catch all the words). His piano accompaniment was entirely upbeat and, sometimes, Ross felt like the mischievous Noel Coward incarnate.

Lorna Dallas is an American musical theater star performing mostly in London. Her precise diction—a "must" in delivering a Coward song—made every word clear, and her coloratura soprano reverberated off the octagonal walls of the theater. Tenor Chris Groenendaal, fresh from the lead in Broadway's Phantom of the Opera, let his lyric voice flow in ballads such as "Sail Away" and "Sigh No More." A grande dame of the Porter and Coward canon, Paula Laurence, came onstage to exuberant applause and sang several of the verse songs including a stanza or two from Coward's parody of Cole Porter's "Let's Do It."

Music director of the evening Peter Howard, arranger for two current Broadway shows and a string of hits, shared his experience working with Coward on The Girl Who Came To Dinner. Although the author of many musicals, Coward didn't know how to write down the music. He summoned Howard to his home in Jamaica (West Indies) where they taped the new songs after dinner every night, and then Howard wrote them down as musical compositions the next day.

American musical theater expert Lee Davis has developed and refined this series over the last five years so the life, lyrics and music of each honoree stands out. Co-producer Patricia Watt selects the accomplished talent that makes the music come alive.

This Sunday evening's salute to Arthur Laurents, who will be onstage, is followed by Tony Award-winning set designer Tony Walton (1776, A Funny Thing Happened on the Way to the Forum, Guys and Dolls, Chicago, Annie Get Your Gun and more) on August 13, and the music of the Rodgers family (Richard and Mary along with lyricists Lorenz Hart, Oscar Hammerstein and Stephen Sondheim) on August 27. Tickets for the Sunday evening series are at the Guild Hall box office (631-324-4050).

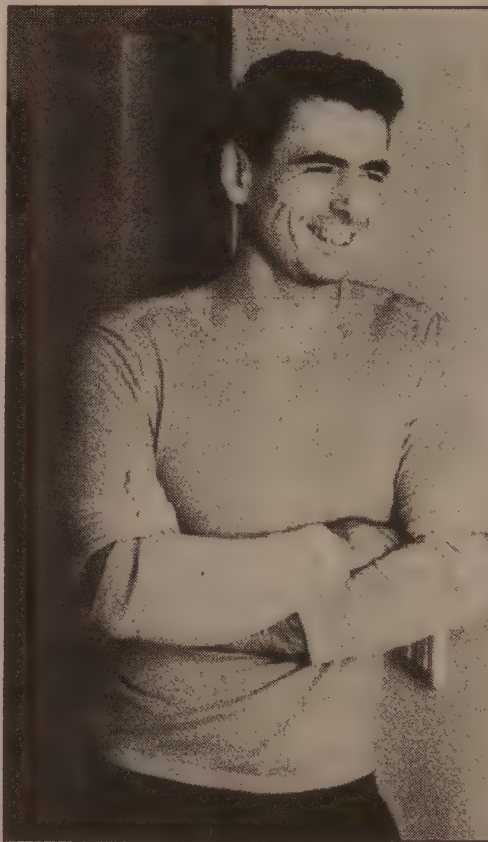

My only caveat for the evening is Guild Hall's "reception" before and after the performance in the little garden. Selling coffee, tea and cookies (at $4.95)—even to the performers who met with the audience after the show—was jarring. Add a dollar or two to the ticket price and include the reception at the end of the evening. •

The Sheltered Islander

OBSERVATIONS OF AN ISLANDER #116 LAND CRUISERS

Many people think Land Cruisers are a type of vehicle made by Toyota. Ahhh, what fools these mortals be. Last Thursday, my mother's cousins, Mary & Art Bruno were visiting from up-Island. Since I have a van, it was naturally my role to be the tour guide and drive the tour vehicle. We spent hours looking at and evaluating homes and counting how many new homes are being built - mini-mansions every single one. I think one sample of every type of architecture that exists is here on Shelter Island. Mary and Art were fascinated by "The Fortress" house on Ram Island Drive. It's this concrete futuristic fortress thing with a big round turret with pipes coming out perpendicular to the turret so it looks like shotgun barrels pointing out. The kids love it. I think it officially guards Big Ram Island from attackers. We also stopped at every dock to admire the boats. As we looked at boats and houses, I began to see a pattern. Many of the older homes have a type of boat I have deemed the Shelter Island Land Cruiser.

A Shelter Island Land Cruiser is a boat in the back yard. There are more Land Cruisers on Shelter Island than boats in the water. A Land Cruiser might be docked in the backyard for a variety of reasons. Maybe it's beached for repairs. Maybe they couldn't get mooring this year and other obvious reasons.

But I think there are more important and not so obvious reasons to own a Land Cruiser.

First of all, safe boating. A Land Cruiser is an incredibly safe boat. Consider that you can have as many people as you want in it without worrying about that annoying safety limit. No one has to wear a life jacket, not even the kids. The potential for drowning accidents is totally under control once and for all.

In what other boat can the Captain drink as much or even more than the passengers? No more looking for the right charts or getting sick from watching the compass spin. Passengers will never again be slammed into the dock again by a snookered pilot.

And speaking of partying on a Land Cruiser, you don't have to jump in after anyone who falls overboard. Run out of ice? Not a problem if you're in a Land Cruiser. You just throw someone over the side who runs up to the house and gets ice. Bathroom breaks, a real problem since most boats don't have a head. Well, just convert your wet boat into a Land Cruiser and the problem is solved.

No longer is it necessary for everyone to face one direction and sing while you hang it over the side. On a Land Cruiser, just jump out and run to the house. The advantages just rack right up.

My parents have a Land Cruiser. Mother says the sound of a wet rag mop slapping the side of the Land Cruiser sounds just like waves hitting the bow. You can buy empty spray bottles, fill them with water and spray each other for that natural feeling. Miss that sea smell? Just leave a bucket of rotting seaweed under the Land Cruiser.

Mother's Land Cruiser has also developed an added bonus. So much dirt and dead leaves have accumulated in the Land Cruiser, a small tree has started to grow. Well, Mom always says, nothing finishes a place like plants. It's about two feet high so far. They're expecting it to be big enough by Christmas to hold at least one string of blinkie lights. What could be better than drinking hot buttered rum around a nice little Christmas tree in your Land Cruiser? Is this a great place to live or what?

Drops are located here and the Water Drops train outside the Shinnecock Inlet on a monthly basis, day and night, summer or winter. I personally weigh a little over 200 lbs. and I have exited an airplane carrying 200 lbs. of equipment; but once suspended by a parachute, the weight is taken up by the harness and once you're in the water, it's buoyant.

"We hope we're not needed, but should someone have the misfortune of getting into a situation where they need the skills of people who work in this capacity, we're ready... to help those in misery.

"Misery is relative," a line I read in a news magazine review," he said. "It's a tremendous statement. You can be miserable if you don't get your cup of coffee in the morning, but compared to what? — somebody who hasn't eaten in ten days?"

"We're always asked, 'What is it like to save someone's life?' Once you go over the edge, you're committed. When my guys go parachuting, there's no safety zone and they can't assess the situation until they're on top of it. It requires a great deal of trust about the unknown. And the trust is a bunch of connecting circles. Each one of us can do something alone, but once you extend beyond that ability, it requires an overlapping bond of trust that somebody's going to support you and help you out.

It extends all the way back to the men and women that fix the machines, put fuel in them, etc. It's a great relationship."

Again, Manuel does not think of his career as heroic. He realizes that if it's on the nightly news or on the big screen, people see it that way. "The squeaky wheel gets the grease," he said.

But after speaking with the pararescuers, who only think of themselves as ordinary men, I doubt very much if the one being plucked out of the raging seas, would envision them as anything less than ANGELS DROPPING OUT OF THE SKY! •

eration later, would now reap remarkable benefits because not only now was there land to build on, but there was insurance money fifteen years later to collect.

As this is written – I went out there last week – about 110 of these homesites have now got houses on them, many of them larger than the ones that were there before. They are still dangerously exposed. But now the shoe is on the other foot and if the storms come and the surf comes, they are a village in danger, not just a bunch of homeowners who have built too close to the water, and money will be made available to make things right again.

Indeed, a ton of money has been spent to make things right for these families who have suffered such a grievous loss. The last two of the jetties were tapered down and a new jetty put between them. It was a proper ending to such a jetty field, at least that's what the engineers say, and so far they seem to be correct. Between the fixing of the final three jetties, the building of the steel wall, the hundreds and thousands of tons of sand, and the hundreds and thousands of tons of sand to come, the project is expected to cost around $60 million dollars over the next ten years.

If you do the math, you'll see that's about half a million dollars for each of the 140 homesites, taxpayers money being spent on the oceanfront properties of the rich.

But there is something else going on. For all that time from the 1940's when some of these homes were first built, to 1980 when they began falling into the sea, there were public walkways that led from the road down to the ocean – the ocean does belong to the general public after all – and people could drive down to the ends of these walkways, park their cars and spend the day picnicking at the beach between the summer homes.

As part of the agreement to rebuild everything, the government got the Village of Hampton Dunes to agree to have these walkways restored. There were to be signs posted and places where the road widened and people could pull up and park and let people off.

Well, the walkways have been built, but a simple drive down the road, restored with taxpayers money, shows that there are no signs to indicate which of these walkways are public or which are private, or places to pull off the narrow two lane road to let anybody out of the car. The general public, as things now stand, has lost the rights to use the beach that they once had, and it is wrong.

Mayor Gary Vegliante of the Village of Hampton Dunes, who has engineered this remarkable turn around of fortune for these families, should be spoken to by all these government agencies that have given all this money, and he should be required to create the drop off points and the signage that is needed.

There also needs to be consideration given to a public lot to accommodate some of the cars of the general public, since there is now no parking allowed along this entire stretch.

These were 140 families who very much were done wrong a generation ago, not intentionally but nevertheless, and things have been made right for them a thousand fold. It's time now to make things right for their benefactors, the taxpayers. •

elaine k.g. benson, her daughter's column

I have never understood why going out on the water or getting away to Shelter Island seems like such a vacation. It doesn't seem to matter whether you're out on a sailboat, motor boat or kayak. Even the ferry will do. Being on the water or crossing water seems more relaxing than staying on land.

Years ago, I owned a shop in Bridgehampton. At the time there was a wonderful restaurant called The Cook on Shelter Island. One of the true indulgences of summer was an evening outing to The Cook. The owner was a man named Malcolm who has since moved to Vermont. The restaurant and my shop are long gone but the memory lives on.

This week I had the pleasure of a sunset on Shelter Island. In fact, it was at a restaurant called Sunset Beach. The plan was to leave Bridgehampton after work and have dinner on Shelter Island. It seemed like a mini-vacation. The sunset was incredibly beautiful and the dinner delicious. I was happy to spend a quiet evening with a friend. We weren't even in danger of missing the last ferry back (as happened in my younger days). It surprised me how different it felt from just staying on this larger island.

Friends came in from Santa Fe this week. They were amazed by our humidity. My girlfriend's hair regained its curl and she didn't have to pay as much attention to skin moisturizers. One of her priorities was to get out on the water in a kayak. Finally on Sunday morning we got our chance. We saw a snowy egret, a cormorant and an osprey in our travels. We were only out for a little over an hour but again it seemed like a mini-vacation.

I almost got to go out on a sailboat to see the fireworks on Saturday. My houseguests decided not to go and even though their week's vacation was almost up, I had spent almost no time with them. I decided to stay home with them. It didn't quite work out that way. Weekends involve obligations and my running out for an hour lasted much more than an hour. The reason was simple. The Children's Museum (CMEE) fundraiser at Channing Daughter's Winery was wonderful. It was hard to pull myself away even when I did leave. It's a good thing I took my girlfriend out kayaking on Sunday because it was our only playtime in a week. Happy sailing, kayaking and fishing! I promise, getting out on the water is better than not getting out on the water.

family collected all of Janis' letters and kept them in a box. Some time after her death, her sister Laura saw a play directed by Randal Myler called Lost Highway which was based on the life of country western singer Hank Williams, Sr. Laura connected with something in the material and approached Mr. Myler. She asked him if he'd be interested in creating a play about Janis. She shared with him the box of Janis' letters. Upon reading the letters, Myler saw a private person who was very different from the public persona he had seen at the Santa Rosa Fairgrounds back in the late 1960s. He was so struck by the discrepancies between the two sides of Janis Joplin, that when he decided to do the show, he thought he would have two Janis' interacting on stage. None of the words in the show are written by Myler. They are all taken directly from Janis' letters and interviews.

The actress Catherine Curtin plays the inner life of Janis. She does not sing, she speaks.

It is through her monologues and the interactions with an interviewer, that we see Janis' pain, and her humor, as well as her secret longings and vulnerabilities. Catherine Curtin does an excellent job of taking us along with her to the private places where Janis hurts, and hopes and dreams.

The singer/performer Cathy Richardson does not really speak, she sings and performs. And she sings as if possessed by Janis herself. From the tone and inflection in her voice, to her movements on stage, Cathy Richardson has Janis down. Sam Andrew, who founded Big Brother and the Holding Company, and is the man who invited Janis to come to San Francisco and join the band in the summer of 1965, later became her one collaborator when she formed The Kozmic Blues Band. Once again as in the past, Andrew appears to be Janis' collaborator as the musical director of LOVE, JANIS, in which he successfully recreates the sound of The Holding Company as well as Joplin's of 11,000 copies. Today, 300,000 copies of Invisible Life have been sold.

His next novel, Just As I Am, was published in hardcover in 1994, selling 52,000 copies and 250,000 in paperback. In 1996, his third novel, And This Too Shall Pass, sold 150,000 copies with paperback sales at 100,000. His fourth book, If This World Were Mine, sold 200,000 hardcover copies in the first month, and won the James Baldwin Award for literary excellence. His next book, Abide With Me, was a finalist for the NAACP Image Award. In 1999, E. Lynn Harris was awarded the Distinguished Alumni Award from the University of Arkansas, Fayetteville.

Talk about turning your life around.

Because he had grown up poor, he created a middle-class history that he shared with his IBM colleagues. He also made up his private life, citing girlfriends in other towns and claiming to have turned down acceptances from Ivy League Schools. His own self-hatred of being gay prompted him to compose an alternative reality with which to gain acceptance and love from those around him. He went from shrink to shrink, attempting to "correct" his sexual problem. Finally, one day, he decided to simply stop running, and have "a talk with God". That was when he started writing, and that is the moment when his life began.

His most recent book, Not A Day Goes By, is the story of an African American, closeted, bisexual male, who falls in love with an African American woman, who happens to be an actress who has a few secrets of her own. They decide to get married, and then stand back, as both their lives and all their secrets begin to unravel. Not a Day Goes By is a devilish romp through a tale starring two striking characters, who demonstrate what can happen when you are afraid to tell the truth about who you really are.

E. Lynn Harris will be at Guild Hall, on Sunday, July 29 at 2 p.m. speaking about his latest novel, Not A Day Goes By.

second band, The Kozmic Blues Band. The album Cheap Thrills includes songs written by Joplin and Andrew, in addition to a highly unique interpretation of Gershwin's Summertime.

It is the combination of Catherine Curtin and Cathy Richardson as they recreate Joplin's life and sing her entire repertoire that is so compelling. They work very well together, as if they were indeed, each one half of a whole. Because the role is so demanding both vocally and emotionally, an additional singer, Andra C. Mitrovich, plays the Janis Joplin (performer/singer) role on alternate nights.

The story is moved along by the interaction between Janis and an interviewer, played by John Beuscher. We never actually see him, we only hear his voice, almost as if he were society's notions inside Janis' head, a constant nagging reminder that people are watching and judging. Randal Myler chose a male voice because the music industry was dominated by men at the time. Janis was going out into uncharted territory where no other woman had gone before, and she was taking a lot of heat for it.

What remains consistently strong throughout LOVE, JANIS is the performances of these two extraordinarily capable actors who appear to embody two sides of the one performer, Janis Joplin, who clearly had no choice but to be completely and utterly herself.

LOVE, JANIS, is Janis Joplin's legacy to us. And in Myer's capable hands it is a celebration. From the psychedelic slides projected on the walls, to the feather boas, the velvet bell-bottoms, the layers of beads, and the absolutely rockin' rock band, LOVE, JANIS will make you want to flash the peace sign as you give the performers a standing ovation. DO NOT MISS THIS SHOW. Not only is it going off-Broadway in the fall, after Saturday night's performance, rumor has it that a very talented, red-headed, British, producer will be taking it to London. LOVE, JANIS rocks at the Bay Street Theatre through August 6. •

if the bird is dead or alive. If the elder answers "Alive," the boy will snap the bird's neck, killing it. If the response is "Dead," the boy will release the bird, also embarrassing the elder — or so they think. After the boys have asked the question three times the elder says, "It is in your hands." As is our future, Marks concludes.

About five years ago Marks produced a number of documentaries for LTV about individuals who have taken a striking spiritual path. One was on the abovementioned Franck, another on Karan Singh, the former Indian ambassador to the United States (Singh ran unsuccessfully for the presidency of India). "Singh has set up eleven different interfaith organizations in eleven different cities in India," said Marks. "He had done remarkable work."

Singh is the Co-Chair of The Temple of Understanding, to which Marks has recently been elected President. Located in Manhattan, The Temple of Understanding was founded in 1960 by Juliet Hollister who, with a little help from Eleanor Roosevelt, began earnest national and international efforts (in particular through the UN) to bring people of different faiths together. "She's worked with the Dalai Lama and Mother Teresa," said Marks. "Recently the Dalai Lama called her his mother. She's eighty-three now and lives in Greenwich, Connecticut."

For years Marks had conducted self healing meditation classes at his Manhattan apartment; this summer he is having the sessions at his house in Amagansett, every Sunday at 10:30 a.m. (anyone interested can call Marks at 631/267-6580).

"There were five folks in Manhattan who had never done any meditation and after a month an half it cleared up their physical problems," said Marks. He spoke about dancer Frances Alenikoff, who could not dance for two years, then she took up self healing meditation with Marks. "She sent me a lengthy letter that it had completely cleared her. She has been doing tons of all kinds of dancing stuff. She's in her late 70s now."

Marks points out that the Latin root from which the word meditation is derived means "to heal." Marks believes that the "spiritual movement" of self healing meditation "helps [correct] illnesses that have a psychological component."

Last autumn Marks attended the State of the World Forum, a conference set up by Mikhail Gorbachev and former U.S. Senator Alan Cranston. There Marks met Dr. Andrew Weil, who has been popularizing alternative medicine. "Dr. Weil says that doctors need to be trained spirituality in integrative medicine and modern medicine education is not in healing."

Citing the importance of proper breathing techniques in normal, daily health, a doctor at the forum related that the human body can survive 52 days without food, twelve days without water, but only minutes without oxygen.

In an extensive article regarding the meditation process he conducts, Marks describes the simple process and methods of breathing and releasing the hurlyburl of thoughts that not only clog our minds but our bodies as well. We are commonly beset by thoughts and worries that we just cannot get out of our minds. In the meditative state, Marks writes, one should neutrally note the thoughts of the cacophony of the mind, then release them "just like the leaves falling off the trees in the winter."

"You are your own observer and see the whole world as a cosmic stage on which you are an actor performing the drama of life," Marks writes. "Your mission is to make the play as harmonious as possible."

Polo Chukker One

It was the first week of the Hampton's Polo season and you needed a polo pony to navigate the stalled traffic on Montauk Highway. Once you arrived, there were several checkpoints to stop polo crashers from getting by. Once in, there was a throng of tent guests including many familiar faces from last year. In fact, there were a few I remember as married last tent season, who were definitely unmarried today, business cards at the ready. Then there was the Princess Grace Foundation tent which was easy to spot because there was dozens of polo-razzi there to photograph Prince Albert and other celebs in the tent. Oh the match: I think the Brant/Hirsh team won and player, Mariano Aguerre scored all the goals for both sides.

Lazio At The Castle

Columnists should try to be bipartisan and since I attended a Hillary Clinton fund raiser at the Casa Basso a few weeks ago, I figured I'd better go to the Rick Lazio event in Southampton. Now if you don't know the difference between the Democrats and the Republicans in the Hamptons, you will certainly know which party you're at, if you follow me. OK, both candidates do a lot of smiling. But Republican guys were ties and one even had an elephant on it, while the Dems are a little more casual. The GOP ladies talk about politics while the Democrat ladies talk about their kids. The GOP guys talk about golf and the market, while the Dems were talking about the market for dot.coms. And the list goes on. Both had calypso bands... it must be politically correct.

Rick Lazio was given a fund raiser at the Galesi Castle on Meadow Lane. He must have been surprised by demonstrators and castle turrets, not to mention the shark tank. No, noone mentioned Hillary in that vein. During the time I was there, Lazio did not address the group, but chose to speak to many individually and New York hotshots Pataki and Guiliani were no-shows.

A Satirist Goes On Sabbatical

By Loraine Page

David Bouchier is leaving us for a while and I thought it would be nice to get a few (more) words from him before he goes. In this e-mail interview, I have kept his British spellings intact in lieu of hearing his mellifluous accent.

Q: You've been writing a New York Times column, doing humorous spots on the radio, and hosting a classical music radio program. How did all of this come about?

A: In 1986, a series of accidents (including marriage) brought me from an English village to Long Island. When you come to a place as a stranger and an alien, you see everything with a wonderful sharpness. I started writing essays about Long Island almost on the first day I arrived here. The material was and is so rich. At first, strangely enough, these were published as columns (with wonderful illustrations) in The Atlanta Journal and Constitution, and other newspapers out there in the great hinterland. Then Newsday published a number of the columns and, in 1992, I managed to persuade one of our local public radio stations in Suffolk County (WSHU-FM 91.1) to run my commentaries every week, during the Monday morning news programme. About a year later, I was lucky enough to be asked to write a bi-weekly column (which later became weekly) for the Long Island section of the Sunday New York Times, which was then edited by Stewart Kampel. The "Out of Order" columns were always different from the radio commentaries, and focused on more local topics. The classical music programme on WSHU, called Sunday Matinee, was yet another accident. During a staffing crisis at the radio station in 1996, I was asked to fill in for this five-hour programme. The longest broadcast I had ever done previously was five minutes, but I was persuaded to give it a try. To my own surprise, I found that I enjoyed hosting a music programme. Not all the listeners switched off in the first two weeks, so it continued - and I've been hosting Sunday Matinee ever since, from 1 till 6 every single Sunday for the past four years.

Q: Considering the somewhat deprecating slant of your material, would you call yourself a cynic?

A: I don't like the word "cynic," even when I apply it to myself. It sounds totally negative. Perhaps the right word is "realistic," or at worst "ironic." Irony is when you look at everyday life, and realize how very strange it is. We all think that our way of life is "normal," but you only have to step back for a moment (to become an "alien," if you like) to see that most of our preoccupations are quite crazy. For example, on LI, I've been fascinated with (and often written about) the obsession with things like lawn care and bathrooms, the absolute lack of planning that allows the landscape to become so horrible, festivals like Halloween and Thanksgiving, all those big, flashy weddings, gigantic houses, and so on and so on. The material is inexhaustible. I love it here, and not just because of the material for irony. I've been lucky always to live in beautiful places — and the East End (or at least the North Fork) is still beautiful.

Q: Since you live in Wading River, do you have any comments on the Twin Forks?

A: Our little town of Wading River is the gateway to the North Fork, or so we like to think, and about 10 million tourists will be driving by between now and Labor Day. Naturally, we welcome these tourists who come to share our peaceful countryside. We just wish they would go somewhere else, preferably the South Fork, where they would have a much more interesting time. My theory is that the dramatic differences between the North and South Forks go way back to the first settlers. The East End was populated by two very different groups. In 1621, a band of dissident Puritans from the Massachusetts Bay Colony landed at Orient Point determined to outshine the Pilgrim Fathers in righteous hard work and serious piety. The South Fork has a different history. In 1646, East Hampton was invaded by a bunch of English pirates, hedonists, and party animals, who had been expelled by the puritan Oliver Cromwell.

Q: Fans love your intellectual British accent. Any comment?

A: People here say that I have a lovely accent, which is kind of them. If my English friends heard this, they would die laughing. In fact I was born in the east end of London, in Whitechapel, which in London terms makes me a genuine cockney.

Q: A collection of your essays is in your book The Accidental Immigrant: America Observed. Why did you choose that title?

A: The A/I was so called because I came here entirely by accident. Back in 1979 I came to teach at SUNY Stony Brook on an exchange programme from the University of Essex in England. I met my wife on LI, and we commuted across the Atlantic for a while. Then we decided to toss a coin to decide who would become the alien — and I won or lost, depending on your point of view.

Q: Do people tell you you're funny and brilliant? What's it like being a celebrity?

A: People think I am much funnier and more brilliant than I actually am. People react to one with an odd mixture of deference, familiarity, and resentment. It's quite unlike a normal human interaction. Strangers peer curiously into my shopping basket at the local supermarket, and I've taken to driving several miles to a pharmacy where no one knows who I am. Whenever I go out, I feel I have to shave and take a shower,

Golfing In Tall Grass

By Roy Bradbrook

The words, 'Tall Grass' are not ones which are calculated to bring joy to the average golfer. In truth, 'Wide Fairways,' 'Flat Greens' are more likely to start us off thinking of pars and even birdies galore. To set the record straight from the start, let me state unequivocally that this new golf course at Shoreham, close to the shores of Long Island Sound, really does live up to its name. But, don't run away in fright or you will risk missing a treat, because this is a golf course that is likely to prove to be one of the most interesting and enjoyable courses you will ever play.

This course originated when the DeLalio family, who have been sod growers for many years decided to diversify and build a golf course on part of the land they own at Shoreham. This was a major project that needed the expertise of professionals in this field and Evergreen Alliance Golf Ltd. from Irving Texas won the contract for the club management and operation.

Firstly, though, the course had to be designed and built and this is where Gil Hanse came into the picture. Now, you probably don't expect a Long Island born golf course architect to be asked to design and build his first golf course in the heart of Scotland, the home of golf but this, as he explained to me, is indeed where he cut his teeth. "I obtained my Masters in landscaping and then was very fortunate in being able to spend a year in the UK, split between St. Andrews and Oxford. So, when the Crail Golf Club in Scotland was looking to build a second new course I applied for the contract and was selected to build it. Tall Grass is the fifth course we have designed and we are delighted with the results." Rodney Hine is Gil Hanse's associate and operated as the site manager during the two year construction period. During the time incredible amounts of the sand lying beneath the surface was excavated and moved to create the design topography.

Tall Grass is a heathland course very similar to those found in parts of the UK and is not strictly a links course. The course is very exposed to the elements and because of this, wind conditions will always be critical in how the course plays. With a length of 6200 yards from the blue tees and a par of 71 it is not overpoweringly long but beware, this is not a course where length off the tee is going to guarantee a good score. To play this course well you have to think your way round it and this is exactly what Gil Hanse had in mind from the start. "We are very proud of the detail of the course. Basically we set out to create an old style Scottish type to get the actual course prepared and open and we have been delighted with the initial response," Oberlin said.

Playing this course was very enjoyable. It has an abundance of character and you are unlikely to ever tire of it, however many rounds you play, because it is unlikely ever to play the same two days in a row. The apparently innocuous 125 yard 14th is a case in point. The hole plays into the north west and depending on the wind off the Sound is likely to vary between a wedge and a 5 iron or even more. This is not your everyday parkland target golf. Bring plenty of balls but above all bring your best golfing brain - you will need it to meet the challenge. The DeLalio family, Gil Hanse and Rick Oberlin and all involved in this project deserve to be proud of their contribution to the ever growing list of great courses of Eastern Long Island, and the best thing is that this is a great course that any golfer can play.

course where not everything is immediately obvious and upfront when you stand on the tee. Club selection and shot shaping are vital for success here. The greens are very true but they nearly all have challenging slopes and catchment areas for wayward shots."

The tall fescue grasses are both decorative and functional in preventing soil erosion. The areas of the tall grass are played as lateral hazards under the local rules but, a word to the wise - if you are unfortunate and go in this rough but are fortunate enough to find your ball, cut your losses and take the one shot penalty by dropping out. Do not try to hit out - the grass will wrap around your club like a friendly boa constrictor unless you have the forearms of a golf pro!

Apart from the trademark grass, this course has a full range of bunkers and there are very large areas of waste sand which can be likened to dried up lakes as well. The benefit is that you can play from these without getting wet.

When Tall Grass first opened at the beginning of July the course was in excellent condition and was a credit to everyone involved. Indeed, probably the only criticism strangely, was that the fairways were too perfect. They could almost rival the greens on some courses but because they were cut very low, produced quite tight lies which tended to prove difficult for many average golfers, more used to playing on woolly and more cushioned fairways.

Rick Oberlin is the Director of Golf at Tall Grass and he was very forthright about their objectives. "This is a course which will provide world class golf to the general public at a realistic price. Our clubhouse is due to be ready by next Spring and this will also provide catering facilities for up to 185 people. The first priority was Lucky Lindy crossed the ocean in his daring transAtlantic flight. Cops nosed around docks at night in search of illegal moonshine. And Jay Gatsby gazed out on the Long Island waters from Gold Coast bluffs, watching his dreams slip away with the tide.

These were the years between the wars when Americans, flush with post-depression optimism took to the waters on small motorboats. Their boat of choice was the Chris Craft Racing Runabout.

which I resent extremely. It must be hell to be really famous. Fran Lebowitz said that the right amount of fame is just enough to get you the best table in a restaurant but not so much that you get interrupted during the meal.

Q: You give humorous lectures and performances around the island. I attended your "A Brief History of the 21st Century" at Brookhaven Lab in January. One of the hilarious things you said was that Long Island reminded you of a huge airstrip and might one day usher in futuristic jet planes of gigantic proportions.

A: I find a live audience stimulating, and it often happens that, with the mind in overdrive, I think of things in front of a live audience that would never occur to me on my own. On the other hand, you get instant feedback from a live audience, which is not always a good thing. Also, in the excitement of the moment, you sometimes say things that would have been better left unsaid. The example you mention — Long Island as an airstrip — is probably an example of this! Over the past several years, I've been invited to speak at dozens of libraries, colleges, private clubs, and non-profit groups, and I must say it's been a pleasure. I've spoken on just about every subject from classical music to traffic engineering, and planning for the millennium and, although I know almost nothing about any of those subjects. My last public event on LI will be a speech at the closing banquet of the Hofstra University Summer

Writers' Conference on July 20, and after that I promise to shut up.

Q: Will you do anything to get material for a column or commentary?

A: Dean Toda, my editor of the Long Island Weekly section of the New York Times, encouraged me to get out and do things — and it's been great fun. Yes, I'd try almost anything. Some of the things I enjoyed most were: auditioning unsuccessfully for parts in several local amateur dramatic productions ("don't call us...."); taking a flying lesson from MacArthur Airport; pretending to be a librarian for a day; a day trip with senior citizens to the Mohegan Sun casino, and paddling a canoe down the Peconic in a thunderstorm. My greatest regret is that I missed riding out to Montauk on a Harley Davidson....

Q: Unfortunately for us, you're leaving for an extended trip to France at the end of the summer. We're looking forward to your return in one year. Will your cats recognize you when you come back? Why are you leaving anyway?

A: France is a pure escape, I must admit it. Nobody goes to the south of France to work. It's a kind of sabbatical. My wife will be on leave from SUNY Stony Brook, and I will be on leave from just about everything. My column in the NYT ended on June 11, and I'll host the last edition of Sunday Matinee on WSHU on July 30. But my Monday morning essays from WSHU will continue as a series of "Letters from Europe." I'm taking a miniature recording studio with me, and the essays will appear as usual on our Web page at www.wshu.org. Also, if I feel energetic enough, I plan to write another book about life in America. But mostly this year in France is intended to be pure R & R, plus I hope to get my French up to a standard where I can at least have a conversation with our new neighbors. We will be back in August 2001, and we have a wonderful person to look after our house and our cats during that time. The cats (Robert Red Cat and Elizabeth Barret Brown Ears) refuse to recognize us even if we just go away for a weekend. When we have been away for a year, it will take a long time and a lot of tuna before they condescend to speak to us again.

Q: Would you like to see more Americans appreciate classical music? Is this part of what inspires you to keep working? Is there any hope for us?

A: One reason I love Public Radio is that we are trying to do something different. We broadcast some of the best things that world culture has to offer, and it's all free. The listeners can choose to support us, or not. My pitch is not: "Buy this, it will change your life." My pitch is: "Listen to this, it's interesting, beautiful, moving, unique." Listeners can take it, or leave it: no charge. The fact that so many listeners choose to take it, and to support it, suggests to me that civilization and culture are alive and well around here. Why else would you be talking to me?

The Sky's the Limit at Dan's 28th Annual Kite Fly

By Dan Sirkin

Has any one ever told you to "go fly a kite?" Well, here's your chance. Dan's Papers 28th annual Kite Fly is only a few weeks away. On Sunday August 6th from 5 p.m. - 7 p.m., Sagg Main Beach will be filled with kites, entertainment, and fun fun fun, as Dan's Papers brings the community together for this yearly extravaganza. No matter what your skill level, interest, or knowledge of kites you are welcome to participate, or join us as a spectator, for this grand occasion. And best of all, this event is unlike any other in the Hamptons. Admission and parking is free, the whole family is welcome, there is plenty of space, no reservations necessary, no speeches, and no one will ask you for a charitable contribution. As a special bonus, it's at 5 p.m., so you have the entire day to add the finishing touches to your kite, or to quickly create one from scratch.

This year's Kite Fly (the first of the new millennium) is sure to be the best ever! It will set the standard for the new millennium. Not only will we have our best entertainers back by popular demand, and our plethora of usual prizes, but we will also have many new surprises for you to enjoy. A brand new Millennium category with a fantastic grand prize will be awarded (make sure to read next week's issue when we reveal the identity of the spectacular prize!) The kites will, of course, be judged in the usual twenty-four categories, including: the Most Newsworthy Kite, the Most Beautiful Kite, the Ugliest Kite, the Tiniest Kite, the Most Exotic Kite, the Highest Flying Kite, the Lowest Flying Kite, the Oldest Kite Flyer, the Youngest Kite Flyer, the Kite Made of the Most Material, the Kite Made of the Most Natural Materials, the Most Colorful Kite, the Most Destructive Kite, the Funkiest Kite, the Funniest Kite, the Longest Tailed Kite, the Most Futuristic Kite, the Most Graceful Kite, the Best Homemade Kite, the Most Nautical Kite, the Junior Kroll Kite, the Most Geometrical Kite, the Scariest Kite, and the Kite in Best Costume.

The prizes for the winners will, like years past, be fabulous. Penny Whistle and Kites of the Harbor will be awarding, what else, kites, so you'll be prepared for next year's competition. Other prizes will be given by Arline's Salon, Rotations, Main Beach Surf and Sport, Deep Hollow Ranch, The Pizza Place, and, of course, many many more. And don't forget our super grand prize for the Best Millennium Kite. The entertainment for this event will be unmatched! Costumed characters, music, and expert fliers will be there to accompany our kite fliers. Archie Comics, will also be back this year, and are sure to bring good old comic book fun!

Dan's Papers Kite Fly is always the highlight of the summer, and this year will be no exception. So, get up and get your hands on a kite - buy it, make it, steal it, or use whatever means necessary, because the fun is only two weeks away. Bring your family, bring your friends, bring a date, or come alone. Just come to Sagg Main Beach at 5 p.m. Sunday, August 6th, and bring a kite.

The Art Of Sign Language

By Janet Berg

Nine-year-old Allie Harding locked her small thumbs together and fluttered her hands as if they were the wings of a butterfly. The beauty of sign language is wonderful because it makes you stop for a moment and observe, while you send a message to your brain. That is something very special in today's times, as everyone seems to be in a constant hurry. Not only is the language for the deaf, a graceful form of art to behold, but you can almost "hear" the music that would go with it.

Allie, a bright and interesting fourth grader from Westhampton, is like a sponge, soaking up as much as she can absorb. While Allie, herself, can hear, she is inquisitive about everything, and so has a private tutor, Ms. Kathy Bedka Strain, come to the house on a weekly basis to teach her the signs.

The teacher informed me, "She is not only self-motivated, and remembers and processes the information; she also applies what she learns. And she learned the language so quickly." Allie told Ms. Bedka, almost a year ago, when she first starting taking the sign language course, 'I think it would scare me if I could only see lips moving and I didn't understand what people were saying.' "So, she is empathetic, when kids can sometimes be mean to one another. She has this rare quality of putting herself inside other's shoes."

Mrs. Cindy Harding said, "When Ms. Bedka comes to our home every week, to teach our daughter, they do not speak to one another. It is totally silent." This was the first time in Westhampton Beach Elementary School's history that a student actually helped teach a class.

Along with Hoe Pulick, the teacher aide, who has a sister that is hearing impaired, Allie gave the course in the after school program, teaching children in grades K-4. They admired their peer's tenacity as she stood in front of the class, signing. Allie described some of the signs. "Like, this is, old man," she said, forming a fist and pulling at a long imaginary beard from her chin. And, as she described different words that excited her, her voice would go up an octave: "Oh, and this is rainfall, she said, with her fingers dancing downward . . . and this, this is my favorite, she added, as her hand seemed to explode out of her forehead. It means idea or accomplish," she added.

It was obvious that Allie has many ideas and accomplishments, as she described her busy schedule of Spanish, Hebrew, cheerleading, glee club, and clarinet. "I had to go right from the sign class to play practice. When I asked what the name of the play was that she was in, she said with a very matter of fact sigh, "I NEED A VACATION." (The ironies of childhood?) Allie felt confident enough to communicate with a fifth grade friend from school, who cannot hear, and invited her playdate over to her house to make tie-dye t-shirts. It took some concentration, and a lot of physical observation, but she was thrilled to have her friend over. "And the t-shirts came out REALLY good too," she added.

American sign language is now recognized in high schools and colleges as a foreign language, called "A language other than English," as there is controversy over the word "foreign," because it was revered in America. In the year 1988, when it came time to elect their 7th resident at Galludet University, where there had always been a 'hearing resident,' there were three candidates, that year, and one was deaf. The hearing resident was chosen, and the students rallied together in outrage, as they wanted a resident they could associate with. They closed down the college and the protest was major news on television and in the newspapers, which compelled the resident to step down. The new deaf resident took office. From there on, their civil rights were heard, and American Sign Language has made advancements in the deaf community. They got connected with the American Disabilities Act; now there are closed captions on television, and fighting for it to be in all movie theatres.

Ms. Bedka was also pleased to say that ASL is now recognized as a "real" language. "We finally broke through the barrier!" Aside from this, lots of advancements in technology have helped safeguard the deaf culture against discrimination." The interpreter added with a deep breath, "The language, itself is beautiful. The students enjoy the facial expressions and body language that go into it. The younger ones are so free with themselves to mime with the other kids, and are comfortable playing charades. They love the animal signs because they're fun and then they go home and teach their little sister. It is a formal language with grammar, syntax and structure that is different from English. The manual alphabet with one hand forms a handshape that represents the letter. "It is like 'seeing' words, rather than hearing them. It is very expressive and very individual.

I was amazed to see Allie's energy up on the stage before a crowd of 350 people, as she signed, and her fifteen year-old sister read the speech for scholarship awards at the end of the school year at the Westhampton Beach performing Arts Center. Allie seemed thrilled as she signed along with the singers, doing the Star Spangled Banner. She used big sweeping motions with the explosions of 'the rocket's red glare.' Her whole face picked up with the glow and the kids just loved it."

CLASSIC CARS WITH BOB GELBER

Recently, Walter Matthau, an actor of singular distinction, passed away. My association with Matthau took place while filming "A New Leaf". Working as his stunt double in the film, I, as a young man, was in awe of the older, talented Matthau.

Having supplied a Ferrari 275 GTB, at that time the fastest production car in the world, I was to drive the Ferrari, as Matthau, throughout the film. The film was shot on locations around Manhattan and Long Island. Every time Walter had a scene with the car I would meet with him and change into his clothes. (Usually in the back of a nearby grocery store, or a public rest room. So much for Hollywood glamour).

I would then drive the Ferrari followed by a camera truck with about six guys hanging onto it with lights and camera. The most memorable of my action driving sequences was hurtling down Fifth Avenue at rush hour, weaving in and out of traffic at over 100 miles per hour.

Elaine May, who directed the film, remarked that it was the most incredible driving that she had ever seen. I replied that it wasn't me, but the car, which was absolutely true. For the period (1967/1968), the Ferrari GTB was one of the greatest road cars ever built; it could make any driver look extremely competent.

I have fond memories of that production. Walter Matthau was a gentleman, very gracious and modest. Elaine May, not only directed, but had a starring role in the production. A pleasure to work with, and a big talent.

Having recently seen the latest car flick, "Gone In Sixty Seconds", I thought it was a bomb, even though I love cars. In fact, it seemed to vanish from theatres in about sixty seconds. Nicholas Cage's screen presence could not even save the film, because it didn't have a story. Cars themselves in films are not entertainment. Shiny metal is just sizzle, the script is the meat.

There were two particular scenes that made me cringe.

When Cage exclaims, "I love to hear the sound of a Ferrari at 5,500 RPM." Hyundais and Kias rev to a measly 5,500 RPM. Street Ferraris wind up to 8,500 RPM. The Formula One Ferraris wail to 14,000 RPM.

Also, why on earth would Nicholas Cage have the hots for that old 1968 Ford Shelby? Unless there was some sentimental attachment that was not mentioned in the film. The vintage years for Shelybs were 1965 and 1966.

Commander Bond's Aston Martin

If this guy had the talent to steal any car for himself, why not a car like the above mentioned Ferrari, or to really escape from the bad guys, a Ferrari F-50? Certainly my car of choice would not be an aging Ford, that even when new handled like a stagecoach.

Throughout the film, I kept asking myself...Do the writer and director know anything about cars..do they even have drivers' licenses?

Since the beginning of film, cars have played supporting roles. In the silent Keystone Cop films there were always wild chases that, in retrospect, involved some amazing stunt driving. In one of the first car films, "Thunder Road", Robert Mitchum is seen fleeing the scene in his V-8 Ford.

The originator of the modern chase scene is probably the film Bullitt with Steve McQueen. The scenes of McQueen's Mustang chasing the bad guys down the hills of San Francisco thrilled movie viewers at the time.

He was the quintessential car enthusiast. A world class race car driver, he was good enough to win the Sebring 24 hour race with his foot in a cast!

McQueen went on to star in one of the best car films ever made, called Le Mans Another equally memorable car film was one entitled Gran Prix, which starred James Gardner, a real life car racer. Gran Prix was directed by the great John Frankenheimer, a fellow car enthusiast. His most recent film, Ronan is very entertaining with incredible driving sequences through the streets of Europe. A must see piece of film-making.

Sylvester Stallone, whom I taught to drive a Model-T for one of his films, is presently in production for a new car film, Let's hope it's as good as Gran Prix and Le Mans.

Ian Fleming was really into cars. He created the two most famous movie cars of all time, Chitty Chitty Bang Bang and James Bond's Aston Martin. Those fabulous 007 movies were the best thing that ever happened for the tiny and struggling Aston Martin company.

There have been many memorable automobile scenes in films: The Gene Hackmen driving sequence in The French Connection, the wild stunts in The Blues Brothers. And for all you Mini-Cooper fans out there, there is the famous cult movie, The Italian Job with Michael Caine. Good story, with great footage shot in Northern Italy.

Fast cars, sexy women, and beautiful scenery, some of the necessary ingredients of film production today. Hey, we've got all that here in the Hamptons.

SCENES FROM SPOKES MAN (OBSERVATIONS FROM A TEN SPEED)

The sky was fading from pitch to indigo as dawn came. So it's run for those Mill Hill House roses on that caffeine trail that leads me from Hampton Bagels on North Main to John Pappas around Main to Dreesens on this particular July morning. It's sort of like that famous triple play, Tinkers to Evers to Chance that is a favorite at my family's annual Thanksgiving Eve game of Charades. So it's early morning coffee with all the East Hampton regulars—the contractors and carpenters, electricians, painters, fire fighters, teachers, gravel pit guys, investment analysts, eager-beaver golfers, bank tellers, Georgica soothsayers, tattooed Navy Vets, E.R. technicians and one admiral type in white (I do not have a clue as to what he does, but I trust he does it well). At Dreesens' I literally have to shut my eyes tight to avoid making eye contact with the slow parade of hot donuts. A nutritionist/physician put me on a diet, I cannot eat anything white (bread, pasta, rice, etc.)

Now totally stimulated and awake, I walk toward Route 27. Appropriately Morgan Rank is displaying an amazing collection of carved walking sticks at his always eclectic art gallery near the formidably challenging intersection of Newtown and Main. I ride the sidewalk down the North side of North Main avoiding the thorn from those rambling roses, mentally salute the War Veterans Memorial at Hook Mill, and glide under the train trestle and aim to turn at I.G.A.

On Collins Avenue, I witness an incredible sight. A lovely woman artist wearing a paint stained blue work shirt and a magenta bandanna tying her long golden hair was putting the finishing touches on a sky blue and puffy cloud life size cow. This is to be a part of the on-going Summer Moo Parade that is wowing them all over New York City. I stare for a full minute, and know at that moment that I want to ride the Tolkien Middle Lane to see my favorite red brick wall and Brittany style mansard manor with the brilliant field of marigolds. Where Egypt splits toward Middle another lone cyclist approaches me in a sturdy Royce Union three speed. She is blithely singing "It's a beautiful Morning, I think I'll Go Outside for awhile." (Performed originally by my favorite group of all time, The Young Rascals, who started it all at the Southampton Barge in the mid sixties). One would think this to be just a Hampton morning idyll, but what is wrong with this picture? The lass is not wearing a helmet. I am reminded of a time when I did not use a helmet, country boy that I am. In those days I rode a Mountain Bike all around Manhattan and the surrounding Boroughs. This trail-designed cycle is most qualified for mean city streets of bums, glass, ragged curbs and tin cans, the basic steering negotiations of an urban environment. One afternoon, I was cycling downtown past the Flat Iron Building at Twenty-third Street. This wedge shaped structure creates a minor wind storm generating the term 23-SKID000, because a lady's skirt might billow up in the air, as she walked past. Stopped at a traffic light across from the Toy Industry Building, a youngish businessman, impeccably dressed in ArmaniPrada—Hugo Boss—of—that—ilk, walks over to me, hands me a card from Transportation Alternatives and simply says, "GET A HELMET." Transportation Alternatives is one of the numerous group that John Kennedy, Jr., actively supported. And he practiced what he preached, riding to work most days on his bicycle, T.A. produced one of my favorite T-shirts which proclaims on the back, "One Less Car." Anyway, I figure if someone takes the time to stop me and advise a helmet, I'd better get me one, which I did the next day. Six months later I was seriously struck by a huge S.U.V. illegally zooming through a red light off of Union Square. I was thrown over the hood smack onto the pavement. In addition to kidney damage, I had to endure several months of knee surgery and rehab, but if not for that helmet, I know this accident could have been brain damaging or fatal. Now, whenever I can, I will instruct a helmetless rider to get one.

This past week I purchased a new helmet from those hard-working Cycle Path crew on Montauk Highway in Wainscott. I realized my old helmet was falling apart while riding those tranquil pine-bordered roads surrounding the East Hampton Airport-Ridge Road, Cobblers Court, Industrial and Daniels Hole Roads. Two sales repairmen at Cycle Path, Philip van Deusan and Greg Parks sold me a "Lance Armstrong" helmet. Phil is a local product of Springs elementary and East Hampton High School. Greg is a clinical psychology major from the University of Kentucky. His specialty is neuro...psychiatry and criminology. Talk about Ultimate Shrinkage! We spoke of Armstrong's amazing accomplishments, overcoming cancer to win two successive Tours de France. We decided there should be a Tour of America International Bicycle Race, naturally starting at Wainscott and ending up in San Francisco. This could be sponsored by various corporations and foundations to benefit worthwhile medical research such as the recently successful Multiple Sclerosis Run in Bridgehampton. Let's make this event happen for the Summer of 2001. Truly a Continental Space Odyssey.

Talking to these two industrious cycle repairmen was most reassuring to me concerning the younger generation. Riding around town, it is most noticeable how many

"Help Wanted signs are in village shops and on construction pick-ups. It seems that teenagers, especially in our "never-ever had a better economy" have not been taught by their parents of the value of working for a living. This situation is compounded by the fact that real estate prices have been driven so high that those who traditionally have worked here can no longer afford to live here. Furthermore, hard working new waves of immigrants are forced to drive back and forth from long distances to work on the East End. Construction crews flood the towns here from mid-Island where housing is affordable.

In these next few months politicians will fly in here like hawks raising dough at fancy fund raisers. Hopefully they will light long enough to develop master plans integrating transportation systems, housing, zoning, equitable taxation, environmentally sound policies, and decent health care for every citizen. Any future leader needs to look at the big picture, the long run. Our region is one of the most potentially dynamic in the nation, but we all must continue the hard work of our pre-revolutionary predecessors in order to survive and flourish. We cannot stand still and become merely a glorified shopping mall. We should emulate University and Company towns to stress work ethics, study and productivity. "Bonac Forever," but Help is indeed Wanted. Ride-On.

Cosmetic Surgery 10 Day Vacation- $975
$5000- Complete Facelift
San Miguel de Allende, Mexico
Board Certified Internationally renowned Surgeon

Pat-Sept.94 Pat-Dec 94

Jetsetters in the know have been "slipping over the border" for ten years to see this famous surgeon. Your surgery is preformed in a state-of-the-art hospital (20 specialists on staff) with a 4-day stay in a private room. This doctor has been Chief-of-Staff at this private hospital for 10 years. His medical team includes an anesthesiologist, M.D. and a cardiologist, M.D., both have been with the hospital for 10 years. The complete facelift includes upper and lower eyelids, forehead, neck and face. The submuscular (SMAS) technique is used to achieve a natural look. A mini-lift, Tumescence liposuction and most cosmetic procedures are available. The doctor's chauffeur drives you from the airport in Leon (a one hour non-stop flight from Houston) to the hospital, to the hospital, to the deluxe hotel ARISTOS, our recuperation hacienda, for your 6 night stay and return to the airport. A consultation video with the doctor and travelogue of this 500 year old mountain "Shangri-La" is available. It's like going back in time!

"Six year's ago this famous surgeon preformed my facelift in this private state-of-the-art hospital. Many of our 300 patients are pleased to share their experience. Call me for phone numbers."

JULY 28

Today Summer Concert Series 2000

NSYNC will perform at 8 a.m. outside the world-famous Today Show studio windows in Rockefeller Plaza.

JULY 31

Bryant Park Summer Film Festival 2000

The free screening of Pillow Talk, starring Doris Day and Rock Hudson, will take place at Bryant Park (42nd St. at Sixth Avenue) at sunset. Bring a blanket, a picnic dinner or popcorn and enjoy the show.

The New York Philharmonic Concerts in Central Park

Arrive early, bring a blanket or chair, a bottle of wine and a picnic dinner and listen to the music of The New York Philharmonic as they perform selections from Beethoven and Bach on the Great Lawn (behind the Metropolitan Museum of Art at Fifth Avenue and 83rd St.) at 8 p.m. The concert concludes with a fireworks extravaganza.

You've got the best of intentions but you just don't have the time or the inclination to prepare a picnic for the nocturnal happenings listed above. Well you don't have to. We've assembled a list of restaurants that will design the menu, make the food and even pack it for you. All you have to do is call ahead to order and pick it up:

Buitoni & Garretti (1006 Madison Avenue, 212-452-4646) offers a feast of Italian panini, avocado-goat-cheese salad, cookies and an Italian soda packed in plastic lunch boxes and available in two sizes ($15 or $25); the latter one also includes fruit and an Italian dessert. Carry On Tea & Sympathy (108-110 Greenwich Avenue, 212-807-8329) offers a half dozen finger sandwiches (filled with egg salad and watercress, cheddar and pickle, and cream cheese and cucumber), a salad, Lilt or Ginger Beer and dessert (scones with clotted cream or sherry trifle) for $12.95. Cucina & Co. (151 West 34th Street, 212-868-2388) keeps it simple with Poilane bread, cheese and charcuterie, chocolate and fruit for two for $49.95 packed in a straw picnic hamper. Josie's (300 Amsterdam Avenue, 212-769-3991) a quasi-vegetarian, health-minded restaurant lets you custom design your own $18.50 meal from choices that include tofu-portobello wrap, macadamia-crusted chicken salad, dense dairy-free brownies and killer-cranberry iced tea. Kin Khao Market (179 Prince Street, 212-529-8425) a Thai takeout bypasses the basket and fills a bamboo steamer with shrimp chips, shrimp satay, mango-avocado salad, sticky rice and ginger brownies for $60 for two. Payard Patisserie & Bistro (1032 Lexington Avenue, 212-717-5252) includes in this $19 classic French picnic lunch a mesclun salad, fruit salad, fruit tart, Evian, and a sandwich of your choice. All you need is a bottle of wine.

And inclement weather need not "rain" on the festivities as all summer long the Lobby Lounge at the Four Seasons offers an indoor picnic lunch, served in an actual basket with lemonade or iced tea, potato salad, a lobster or chicken club, cherry "newtons" and brownies and even a potted grass centerpiece for $42. If you can't go to the lawn the lawn will come to you.

Shop 'til You Drop ...With Maria Tennariello

The weeks are flying by and we're half way through the summer and the shops are starting their mid-summer madness sales. The beat goes on. So...Let's shop!

Treasure Island located at the Wainscott Village Center on Montauk Highway in East Hampton is having their "Mid-Summer Inventory Clearance Sale Event." There are two shopping levels here to shop in. Check it out, you won't be sorry.

If you want to do something different this weekend, stop off at Marders on Snake Hollow Road in Bridgehampton for an "Antiques Yard Sale" that is running for three days only, Friday, Saturday and Sunday, July 28, 29 and 30 from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. There is a large selection of overstocked merchandise to choose from with values up to 50% off. This sale is being held in the Back Barn and is a cash and carry deal. You will find a barn full of unique pots, arbors, benches, garden antiques and more. Look for the "red tag" merchandise and save, save, save!

Southampton was busy and shopping was fun there this weekend. Good things come to those who are patient and wait...At Titano, on Nugent Street in Southampton Village, you can take 20% to 30% off selected Egyptian cotton shirts for men and blouses for women. Look for a beautiful light weight summer sweater to wear on those cool nights? Look no further, Titano has them in lots of beautiful pastel colors. Open daily from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. or just give Priscilla a call at 287-4123, she will be glad to help you.

While you're strolling through Southampton, stop at Club Colette on Main Street for the Alberto and Stefania Sabbadini Collection from Friday, July 28, through Monday, July 31 from noon until 9 p.m. Alberto and Stefania are the famous renowned jewelers from Milan and they will be unveiling their latest collection when they arrive for their annual visit to Southampton. Sabbadini designs his jewelry to reflect and match the latest high fashion trends so the jewelry goes perfectly with a woman's clothes. "Women find his jewelry flattering and he likes to make women look their best." This is a must see collection.

On Main Street in Southampton look for that new great clothing store, Peter Elliot. You will be happy to know that Peter Elliot is having a "Summer in the City" sale now through August 5, so don't let that country grass grow under your feet. This shop is filled to the rafters with fabulous merchandise for both men and women, all ages and sizes. Check out the pants from Zanella, Bernard, Zins, Valentini and Peter Elliot. Try picking out a tie or two at 50% off and look for their famous ten second specials and the mystery of the $10, $25 and $50 baskets. How about designer sport jackets, shirts and dress shirts, and wonderful women's suits from Kiton, Isaia and Herno along with women's jackets from Belvest and Valstarr to name a few. Women's shirts and sweaters are available at 50% off and there are T-shirts from Three Dots and Flatiron at 30% off. Look for the 120% linen collection at half price. Whew.....Bet you can't just buy one!

A new store just opened on Jobs Lane called Altona/

Sugar and it is causing quite a stir in Southampton. Altona/Sugar carries a full line of Sugar Sportswear, contemporary separates, Bensimon tennis shoes, and T-shirts, Citadine pants and Jean Louis Fernandez bags just to name a few. The fall samples of the Sugar Collection will arrive any day and orders can be placed for delivery in September and October. Right now though, the shop is stocked with current summer merchandise and also the first fall previews of pants and jackets. So...Get going!

Isabelle Laroche, located on Jobs Lane in Southampton is the place to go if you are frustrated by not being able to find quality ready-to-hang draperies. French born, Isabelle L'Huillier launched Isabelle Laroche, Inc. Draperies. At her Southampton store you can find a wide range of ready-to-hang drapes and valences that are adjustable in width and length, along with matching pillow shams and quilted bedspread that are all made from the finest French and Italian fabrics.

Friday, August 2 and Saturday, August 5, are the dates to mark on your calendar's for the J. Mendel and Town & Country Launch of the Fall/Winter Collection 200 at Jimmy's, 60 The Circle in East Hampton.

On my way home I stopped off at Svenska on Washington Street in Sag Harbor just to check out the lovely Scandinavian designed home furnishings. What a great selection of furniture, table linen, dinnerware, flatware, crystal, paintings, sculpture, textiles and more. This shop has great gifts and interesting merchandise. Love shopping in this town!

Time to run, my mom and sister are coming out for the weekend and are looking forward to a shopping good time!

Until next week. Ciao and Happy Shopping!

ART COMMENTARY

With Marion Wolberg Weiss

BARNET & MORLEY AT ARLENE BUJESE

Will Barnet is the kind of artist who's a critic's dream; he has many signature works, not just one, which identify his aesthetic development over the last several decades. Which is how it should be when an artist is special.

We doubt, however, whether some people would consider a lack of one signature as positive. (A musician friend of Jean- Michel Basquiat's in the fictional film about the latter's life certainly didn't. Do the same thing over and over again so people will recognize your art, he told Basquiat.)

The current show at East Hampton's Arlene Bujese Gallery is a case in point. There's little about Mr. Barnet's etchings from the 1930s and 40s that mark them as his, except perhaps the artist's stylistic variety which indirectly reminds us of Cubism and Geometric Expressionism to name two influences.

"Reminders" is the name of the game here: Mr. Barnet himself writes that these pieces are a reminder of other times... often drawn from life... What he means by life is not what this critic interprets as life, however. While it's true that Mr. Barnet has a penchant for the everyday which signifies a particular time and place (sailors on leave, Italian section of the City, a homeless man), there's still his own personal life or world view at work.

For example, these etchings demonstrate a quality of human relationships that is quite unlike a series about his family which were exhibited in New York several years ago. Here, figures are not solitary ones; couples are looking at each other. There are no interior scenes where windows and doorways spell entrapment. The etchings convey liberation and joy at being alive (even his homeless man in Desolation.)

Malcolm Morley's etchings and lithographs also communicate a sense of memory — of other times and places. Unlike Mr. Barnet's pieces, however, they capture more exotic locales like Greece and the Azores. Given the often mythic nature of these settings, the exotic can become commonplace as well, similar to Mr. Barnet's Central Park and the East River.

One intriguing and ironic aspect of Mr. Morley's work is that the more exotic (or civilized) the place he is depicting, the more seemingly naive his style becomes. Consider Beach Scene with Parasailor and Chinese Horses, as examples. Mr. Morley empowers his stories and subjects with both privilege and primitivism.

The current show will be on view at the Arlene Bujese Gallery until August 3.

Will Barnet's "Summer Memory"

HONORING THE ARTIST: LARRY JOHNSON

Although it's sometimes difficult to carry on a meaningful conversation over the phone, this is surely not the case when one talks with Larry Johnson. The dialogue bounces back and forth like a game of catch and throw, Mr. Johnson not only interested in conveying his own thoughts but listening as well to the person on the other end.

Despite the fact that he perceives himself as someone who is less than completely comfortable talking about his own life/art, Mr. Johnson is a rare breed indeed; he can converse with enthusiasm about diverse topics, including both factual subjects like the Civil War and sailing, and more conceptual ones like seizing opportunities and creative growth. In the process, connections are established between topics and people alike.

Regarding the Civil War (a specific interest for this critic who grew up near many of the battlefields), Mr. Johnson notes that he became fascinated with the subject after seeing Ken Burns documentary. Mr.

Johnson's fascination with history, in fact, goes beyond the War between the North and the South: "Everyone should know about their personal history as well as the history of where they live.. You feel disconnected if you don't."

Mr. Johnson feels particularly iconnectedi to the local landscape, and this is where the topic of sailing comes in. Seeing this area from a sailboat has contributed to my love of the East End, he notes. "The coastline is so articulated, so many variations. I like to get off the beaten path, to go into undiscovered places. One favorite place is Cedar Point; another is Shelter Island (particularly West Neck Harbor) where my son, James, and I sometimes go biking."

When talking about his art and seizing opportunities, Mr. Johnson seems equally as spirited, citing another kind of "connection" that he feels. "I believe the idea of synchronicity has been working at various times in my life." For example, when Grumman Aerospace closed in 1994, he took the opportunity to paint full-time. Earlier, he felt things were right to go back to school, graduating from Southampton College with a B.A. in Fine Arts when he was thirty-three-years-old.

Mr. Johnson notes a more recent example— an event that motivated him to continue with his art on a full-time basis: I had just gotten involved with a co-op, the Bellport Lane Gallery, when Agnes Ehrenreich, owner of the Chrysalis Gallery, read a review of mine in The New York Times Long Island section. She called me up and asked to see my work. When I went to see her, I wasn't there fifteen minutes when a customer asked if one of my paintings was for sale. I'm so glad I didn't wait to see her but went over as soon after she called.

Future plans call for Mr. Johnson to make other connections— between the art he is now doing and subjects he pursued when he was creating work as primarily recreation. Whatever the subject, however, you can bet it will involve the water, evident on this week's cover of Dan's Papers.

Larry Johnson

Wherever the future takes Mr. Johnson, you can also bet that he will be forever seeking connections and experiences that prompt him to remark, I will always be a student.

—Marion Wolberg Weiss

Mr. Johnson's work can be seen at Southampton's Chrysalis Gallery.

preview: artists on film: does art imitate life? at guild hall

As a prelude to the fall release of the movie, Pollock, starring Ed Harris as Jackson Pollock, the Pollock-Krasner House and Guild Hall are co-sponsoring a series of four recent fictional films about real artists, doomed to a life of misery. Coincidentally, one movie has a direct connection to the East End.

Julian Schnabel, a well-known painter and Montauk resident, wrote and directed the first work in the series, Basquiat. While the drama may inherently lie in the true story of the 1980s graffiti artist who rose to fame and fell just as quickly from a drug overdose at twenty seven, Mr. Schnabel takes liberties with the facts, making the gay Basquiat a womanizer, for example.

What's really important, however, is how Mr. Schnabel uses the film medium as an artist would, empowering his cinematic imagery with New Wave techniques where exaggeration, spontaneity, and illogic often prevail-traits that characterize, in fact, Mr. Schnabel's own work. (His penchant for Basquiat whom he actually befriended could be explained by his employment of both visuals and words/ text, a favorite Basquiat signature.)

Art (of film) does indeed imitate life, the movie capturing Basquiat's personality and creative process in a articulate way: the movie's structure (plot) is disconcerting and fragmented, however, just like Basquiat's endeavors.

While the film Camille Claudel was not directed by an artist, it is based on a respected literary source, a biography by Reine-Marie Paris. Most events are true, therefore: art once more imitates life. And what an existence Camille had, sharing some similarities with Basquiat. One imagines that it was not necessary to add much drama to Camille's compelling and poignant life with sculptor Rodin (played by Gerard Depardieu): her rise as a gifted sculptor herself and her untimely plunge into insanity.

Victimization and insanity is also a focus of Vincent and Theo, directed by noted American filmmaker Robert Altman. Yet it's the co-dependence of the two brothers that's the real thrust, a theme never examined in a film like Lust for Life. It's an off-beat movie (with Tim Roth as van Gogh) that may well be closer to the truth than any other interpretation.

Finally, there is Surviving Picasso which is also based on a book, Arianna Huffington's Picasso: Creator and Destroyer. While no one can say for sure whether Anthony Hopkins Picasso is true -to- life, his portrayal reverses the image of an artist as a doomed victim. One thing is certain, however. The well-known Merchant-Ivory team has recreated an authentic milieu where Picasso and Françoise Gilot engage in an equally believable relationship.

Marion Wolberg Weiss, curator/ host of Artists on Film

Both Vincent and Theo (Aug. 1) and Surviving Picasso (August 8) will be shown at Guild Hall at 7:30 p.m. Call 324-0806 for information.

FREE ADMISSION

Here comes another week chockful of theater, music, opera, international films and interesting speakers. To whet the appetite: the dynamic new musical Love, Janis and a Monday-only performance of Fully Committed at Bay Street Theatre; klezmer, cabaret and then a musical Broadway salute at Guild Hall; rock & roll and then an Off Broadway musical at Westhampton Beach Performing Arts Center; the Hamptons International Film Festival free screening of a new movie; Opera of the Hamptons' Tosca in Water Mill on Sunday; Jimmy Buffett's "All for the Sea" concert at Southampton College on Monday (sold out). The Bridgehampton Chamber Music Festival and Hamptons Shakespeare Festival both begin next Wednesday (August 2). For high-profile sporting events, the New York Hamptons team (Patrick McEnroe et al) are back for the final WTT matches at Sportime in Quogue (July 26-30), and the Bridgehampton Polo Club has its weekly match on Saturday, 4 p.m. (raindate, Sunday, 2 p.m.).

If you have a spare hour or two, the big benefits this weekend are for The Nature Conservancy (dinner dance), The Retreat ("Artists Against Abuse" plate auction), and the Montauk Playhouse Community Center (Beard's Bash at The Lighthouse). East Hampton's country-style L.V.I.S. Fair, with games, rides, homemade foods and trash-to-treasures for sale, goes on all day Saturday at their house on Main St. For details on the above and other events, read on:

THEATER

Playwrights' Theatre of East Hampton presents another staged reading of a new play on Friday and Saturday at the LTV Studios in Wainscott (Daniel's Hole Rd. to Industrial Rd.). Fellow Traveler by John Herman Shaner concerns two old friends, both Hollywood screenwriters, who have a falling out until one needs a special favor. Showtime is 9 p.m. and a brief discussion plus desserts follow the performance. To reserve a ticket ($15), call (631) 329-9909.

Sag Harbor's Bay Street Theatre has a new rock musical headed Off Broadway. Love, Janis, shows rock legend Janis Joplin's too-brief rise and fall. The show plays Wednesday through Sunday. On Monday, July 31, Bay Street brings in the hit show Fully Committed, a comedy about life in a four-star restaurant. For tickets to Bay Street's attractions, call the box office at (631) 725-9500.

Take Five 2000 with Jan Silver

The Westhampton Beach Performing Arts Center brings in the Off Broadway musical comedy Pump Boys and Dinettes on Saturday (8:30 p.m.) and Sunday (7 p.m.); call (631) 288-1500 for seats. Montauk Theatre Productions continues its successful staging of Ted Swindley's musical play Always...Patsy Cline, about the popular country singer who died at a young age (tickets $15-$20, call 631-668-5656). East Hampton's Guild Hall has a staged reading of Shakespeare's comedy As You Like It, performed by Off Broadway's Blue Heron Theater Company on Monday, July 31, at 7 p.m. ($12-$15 tickets at the door).

The Hamptons Shakespeare Festival begins preview performances of the comedy Much Ado About Nothing on Wednesday, August 2, 7:30 p.m. outdoors at Roosevelt County Park in Montauk. Come early with a picnic supper and lawn chair's plus a sweater or jacket. There is also bleacher seating and refreshments available. A $10 donation per attendee is suggested. Opening night is this Saturday, and HSF plans some pre-performance revelry. They also have classes for children and a special children's performance of Much Ado on Monday, August 31 at 10 a.m. (no charge). For more information about the opening-night party or any questions, call HSF at (631) 267-0105.

MUSIC

Metropolitan Klezmer will be at Guild Hall, East Hampton, on Friday to play the unique blend of Yiddish folk music, early Broadway show tunes and jazz called klezmer music. On Saturday, the "Cabaret by the Sea" series continues with the emotive songs and ballads of Jane Olivor, who has been compared to Streisand and Piaf. Sunday evening, "American Musical Theater Salutes" playwright Arthur Laurents (Gypsy, West Side Story and others). Mr. Laurents will be interviewed by host Lee Davis, and Broadway stars KT Sullivan and Lee Roy Reams will sing and dance to selections from Laurents' shows. All Guild Hall programs start at 8 p.m.; for tickets, call the box office at (631) 324-4050.

Westhampton Beach Performing Arts Center has the G.E. Smith Band playing their high-octane rock and blues at 8:30 p.m. with then backs up special guest, singer/songwriter Taylor Barton on Friday (call 631-288-1500 for tickets).

Opera of the Hamptons presents the melodious and dramatic Puccini opera Tosca on Sunday afternoon, 4 p.m., at the Villa Maria on Mecox Bay, Water Mill. This is both a regular performance and the beginning of a benefit evening for Villa Maria (Siena Spiritual Center) with cocktails and dinner at the Villa. Tickets for the performance are $40 in advance or $50 at the gate; for preferred seating, cocktails and dinner, a $150 donation is requested. Call (631) 726-4740 or (631) 728-8804.

The Bridgehampton Chamber Music Festival opens its 17th season on Wednesday, August 2, with an all-Beethoven concert at 8 p.m. There is a children's program on Thursday, August 3, at 5 p.m. featuring excerpts from Mussorgsky's Pictures at an Exhibition, performed by Festival artists and young piano prodigy Joyce Yang, plus fine-arts teacher David Wallace. All programs are at the newly air-conditioned Bridgehampton Presbyterian Church, Main St. For tickets ($25 adults, $20 seniors, $10 children), call (631) 537-6368. There

PARIS REVIEW

Picture this . . . me, the lucky, dandy kid himself, walking jauntily down the Boulevard du Montparnasse and filled with nostalgia and acid reflux gas. The gas is too many espressos at the Cafe Select and the nostalgia is for my student days around the corner at the Academie de la Grande Chaumiere and the little cinema around the other corner on Rue Brea. After a gas pang, there is another pang of nostalgia recalling that the good ol' Sag Harbor Cinema back home always reminded me of the small Paris theatre where I was taught by classic films, ours and theirs. These days the French are trying to stem the popularity of U.S. movies, but, I bet even Scary Movie which I hated, will be a hit here, too. However, may never appear in Theatre Brea or the Sag Harbor Cinema, Gerald Mallow's bomb shelter from blockbuster type movies.

THE MOUSE TURNS TO US RATTY KIDS

The Mighty Mouse Factory . . . Disney's monster multimedia conglomerate has been suffering gas attacks from over-indulgence, too, especially in their feature film division where their blockbusters have fizzled into the other kind of bomb . . . the kind dreaded by executives. So, movie mogul followers, there's a new head on the beast . . . one who remembers the kinder, gentler type of Disney movie that would not embarrass dear old Walt. Films like Son of Flubber, That Darn Cat!, The Shaggy Dog-like tamer beasts. Therefore, enter The Kid (not me) . . . Disney's ! The Kid. Why Disney's The Kid? Well, it is either to signal the company's new era (probably lasting five or six months) or, to avoid confusion with Charlie Chaplin's classic of the same name or whatever, I doubt if it was the product of the film's screen-writer. Audrey Wells, an intelligent scripter, she wrote The Truth About Cats and Dogs (just a coincidence regarding those earlier pet movies . . . honest) and, oddly, the film may not appeal to women, for the film centers on a self-centered, self-absorbed, selfish, workaholic male, Russ Duritz, a highly successful image consultant . . . the image he mostly preens is his own. But, a nervous twitch in his eye is the first signal that there may be something lacking . . . could it be the dog he never had (eek! those pets again), or a relationship with his aging father, or (Yikes!), a wife? Of course, there is his lovely assistant who is as smart as a whip. It could be he's afraid of a whip. She's the charming Emily Mortimer (turned down by Hugh Grant in Notting Hill). They disagree about most things, especially his scurvy lot of clients. He has one nice client, an African-American athlete, Chi McBride, who doesn't need reimagining . . . except for the pounds he keeps adding to his big, good body. It is The Imager himself who really needs the help. And, most women in the audience will quickly agree because, he is . . . TA-DAH! Bruce Willis! Whom they pooh-pooh as simply a smirk. Or, is it jerk?

BRUCE GIVES WOMEN THE WILLIS WILLIES

I happen to like his work and I like this movie. Cousin Wwoocie really delivers in this movie (smirk and all) as he does in all the many different roles he's taken on. He is much better than his action movie image that dies hard. And, he's as brave as that blood-soaked characterization. After all, he's allowed himself to be co-starred with a little boy again. That takes courage! This time the boy (KID) is Spencer Breslin, a tubby little rascal you might see, in a JELLO commercial. He is the trim, handsome, smart-ass (sorry, this is a G movie) sharpster, Russ, when he was only eight years old and a real loser. Rusty, is what he was called and as compared to the slick, shiny, smooth Russ . . . he certainly was! Lovable, hungry Rusty comes to visit his forty year old self-to-be, after being presaged by the twitch and a shiny bright red bi-plane, big in flight, and as a toy. The whole thing is a flight of fancy. Try not to think of it as a time-travel thing like Back to the Future. Think more like Dickens A Christmas Carol. And, know less about it going in . . . just enjoy the nice and obvious fuzziness . . . Ms. Wells nice script . . . and a delicious morsel of Lily Tomlin as Bruce's secretary who takes a lot but, zings it back as freshly as it comes in. Jean Smart, also has a good grip on a small part as a TV news anchor. This is one of the few feel-good movies where Christmas is not exploited, at all, so, I recommend you sit back and let the cheesy moonlight of this picture lull you into a "Christmas in July" mood.

Disney's The Kid also won't be at the Sag Harbor Cinema or Theatre Brea but, here between the Jardin des Tuileries and Place Vendome, who gives a hoot, anyway which way.

Guy-Jean de Fraumeni is the producer of award-winning films for ABC, NBC, PBS and European Feature Films. He has judged the major motion picture and TV award competitions. He is assisted in his column by Sarah Halsey.

are two benefits for the Festival. On August 5, there is an elegant dinner and concert at the Atlantic Golf Club; on August 12, there's a "Taste of Summer" with a concert, wine and hors d'oeuvres at Channing Daughters Winery in Bridgehampton ($100 donation). Call the Festival at 537-6368 if you wish to attend these events.

Pianofest, the program for emerging concert pianists, holds its weekly recital with commentary on Monday, July 31, 2 p.m. at the Avram Fine Arts Theater, Southampton College, to accommodate the Jimmy Buffett concert there later that day. The Perlman Music Program has nightly informal concerts with its exceptionally gifted students on weekday evenings; call the program on Shelter Island at (631) 749-0740 for a schedule.

Music at the Clubs: the Dennis Raffelock Trio will be at Bridges (Sag Harbor/Brdghampton Tpke.) on Friday followed by DJ Karen Ward; Hunky Page is at Sag Harbor's American Hotel piano weekends; the Kipling Trio plays light jazz and pop standards on Friday at Kipling's, Bridgehampton; Stefanie Cardinali, Paul Gene and Rick Salter perform from the jazz/pop standards canon at Montauk Yacht Club on Wednesdays and Saturdays; Diana Rogers is a delight late Sunday afternoon at East Hampton's Maidstone Arms; singer/songwriter Shana Young will be at Southampton's Hansom House with Fred Gillen Jr. on Sunday, 9:30 p.m. There's always good music at Bridgehampton's Wild Rose starting with the Lone Sharks on Thursday; the WPBX-FM jazz series continues Sunday at the Rose with the Bill Charlap Trio (7:45 and 10 p.m.) Amagansett's Stephen Talkhouse has Seven Nations and then Circus Mind on Friday, Larry Carlton on Saturday, Funktion on Sunday, country/folk star Jimmie Dale Gilmore on Monday and singer/songwriter Maria Muldaur next Wednesday (call 631-267-3117 for Talkhouse tickets). SPEAKERS

The Bridgehampton library's "Fridays at Five" chat features popular writer James Brady talking about his Korean War memoir, The Marines of August. Refreshments follow the talk; rainsite is the Bridgehampton School. Famous New York art collector/dealer Richard Feigen will be at Book Hampton, East Hampton, on Friday at 7 p.m. talking about his new book Tales from the Art Crypt. On Saturday at 5:30 p.m., novelist Dori Carter will talk about her comic novel Beautiful Wasps Having Sex at Book Hampton. Over in Sag Harbor at Canio's Books, playwright/poet Clare Coss and poet Robin Becker will read from their work on Friday at 6 p.m.; on Saturday at Canio's novelist Steven Varni will read from The Inland Sea.

The Poetry Marathon series at Amagansett's Marine Museum continues on Sunday, 4 p.m., with Keven Bridge and Harvey Shapiro reading.

Dr. Amira el-Azhary Sonbol will speak on "Women and Islam" to the World Affairs Council's open meeting on Saturday, 5 p.m., at Duke Hall of LIU/Southampton College. Novelist/journalist Nicholas Gage will speak about "The Hellenic Legacy: Freedom and Fulfillment" at Southampton's Greek Orthodox Church on Saturday at 7:30 p.m.; for more information, call (631) 288-6644.

FILMS

Documentary filmmakers Jon Nastasi, Dan Steiger and Alec Cohen will screen their new film about civil disobedience against U.S. military weapons-testing on Vieques, Ni Una Mas, on Sunday, 6 p.m., at Canio's Books, North Main St., Sag Harbor. There is no admission charge and a discussion with the filmmakers follows the showing. Guild Hall's "Artists on Film" series with Dr. Marion Wolberg Weiss shows Vincent & Theo about the Van Gogh brothers interdependence on Tuesday, August 1, at 7:30 p.m. (tickets $8-$10 at the door). The Film Society of Lincoln Center's award-winning foreign film to be shown next Thursday, August 3, is the Hong Kong mystery/romance Chungking Express ($10-$12).

BENEFITS AND SPECIAL EVENTS

The Hamptons International Film Festival has a free screening on Saturday of a new comedy, Happy Accidents, starring Marisa Tomei and Vincent D'Onofrio. Gates open at Sayre Park, Bridgehampton, at 7 p.m. Bring a picnic supper and blankets or lawn chairs. The movie starts after dark.

The Retreat, the local center for victims of domestic abuse, holds its much-anticipated "Artists Against Abuse" auction of original hand-painted plates designed by celebrities and artists on Saturday. There are more than 100 plates in this year's auction by artists such as Will Barnet, Ross Bleckner, Cornelia Foss, Jane Freilicher, Connie Fox, Jim Gingerich, April Gornick and even Rudy Giuliani. The event is at Channing Daughters Winery, Scuttlehole Rd., Bridgehampton, beginning at 5 p.m. There is both a silent auction and a live auction which starts at 6 p.m. With food from Art of Eating, wine, and music by the Larry Rivers' band, this is always a lively event. For a catalog showing the plates, to leave a bid, or request tickets for the auction party ($75), call The Retreat at (631) 329-4398.

The theme of this year's Nature Conservancy dinner dance is "Enchanted Forests." Since it takes place on the ground of the Mashomack Preserve's Manor House on Shelter Island, the theme is very apt. This event always has unusual items for its live and silent auctions and special raffle. The Grand Raffle prize this year is a three-day stay at Bermuda's Southampton Princess resort including a swim with dolphins. Other raffle items are a kayak, Sunfish, catered parties, Orvis's Vermont fly-fishing school for two, a week at a ski condo in Utah, etc. Tickets for the dinner dance start at $200 and raffle chances are $7 each or $50 for 8—call (631) 329-7689.

Naturalist photographer Peter Beard has organized a "Bash at the Lighthouse" this Saturday to raise funds to restore the Montauk Playhouse (built by Carl Fisher in 1928) as a much-needed community center. The party goes on from 6 until 10 p.m. at the Montauk Lighthouse. There will be food, drink, Cajun/zydeco music from Loup Garou, and both live and silent auctions. For tickets ($100), call (631) 668-3381. —Jan Silver

Wine Online: How Sweet It Is

By Rachel Sokol

If you are interested in the delicacy of wine tasting, purchasing or winery touring, the internet provides a large array of sites and links to sweeten up your summer. Dining with knowledge of "winning" evokes a sense of community among fellow wine lovers. With this in mind, Wine.coms, is an online source for consumers, collectors and wine lovers. There is a wine board on the site for wine advice as well as a searchable database of wine terminology. Consumers can select a list of wine topics to research through www.wine.com. The Vintage Village Link provides links to wine shops, online stores, more information on fine wines and insuring wines and gifts. The site also posts reviews and articles by wine writers, as well as links to their sites. Winehouse.com (www.winehouse.com) is another great site for re-searching various wines, but they mostly ship wine and gift basket orders to the West Coast. Nonetheless, Winehouse.com posts wine reviews from consumers and professionals providing a wine-rating list by the staff. Registration is required for navigation on the site, and a searchable database can help you create your own wine portfolio. Specialty food and wine can be purchased through the Tavolo online store (www.tavolo.com). Conduct a wine search on the site that has everything for gourmet cooking needs. Kitchenware, gifts and cookbooks are also available for secure purchase on Tavolo.com. Meanwhile, FunWithWine.com will enhance your knowledge of wines through social means by hosting wine-tasting events and wine dinners in Manhattan and the Hamptons (Sign on the site for information on upcoming events). Funwithwine.com was created in late 1999 by wine collector and enthusiast Rick Weissman, a wine collector for over ten years. "We wine lovers at FunWithWine.com all have day jobs, but we've made wine a part of our lives with this site," he said. All wine events posted on the site and hosted by FunWithWine.com, are open to the public, and you can register right on the site and sign up for the mailing list. The next event posted will be Friday, Aug. 4, 2000 at 8 p.m. in Sagaponak at the Wolffer Estates. Its theme is an Australian Wine party in which twelve wines from Australia will be available for tasting, along with wine samplings from the Wolffer Vineyards. For those interested in attending, spots can be reserved by credit card through the site, and there is an advanced reservation purchase cost. For those confused about choosing a perfect wine, FunWithWine.com supplies members with a listing of wines available at certain Manhattan restaurants. Weissman hopes future plans for the site will include photos from FunWithWine.com events as well as a wine webzine. "This site is designed for the wine community, and the internet is an extension of our business," Weissman said. "It's been a fun project which draws attention to my passion." FunWithWine.com is for wine lovers who like to have a good time and mingle with fellow wine enthusiasts. The site also has links of, "Great Wine Picks" and a Manhattan Events Calendar. Gifts-by-mail sites RedEnvelope.com and Send.com also provide wines and champagne-by-mail products and accessories for any occasion. RedEnvelope.com sells wine accessories, such as bottles and racks, while Send.com has direct links to ship Champagne and Wine gift baskets. Searches can also be conducted by price and both sites accept credit card orders.

silvia lehrer's cooking column

"There ain't nothing in the world so good when it's cooked right", said Huckleberry Finn - as corn. Cooking right for me is simply "straight up," - boiling, buttering, salting and peppering. That's it!

Here's how to pick fresh corn without pulling back on the husks, a practice that is frowned upon at farm stands and supermarkets. First, when selecting corn look for bright green, tight husks and fresh, moist silks. Feel the outside to see that the corn has filled out from top to bottom and trust your local farmer for the kind of corn he is growing. Remember buying corn at your local farm stand, where corn is picked daily, is the next best thing to picking your own. The natural sugars in corn turn to starch the moment they are picked, and sweetness is what corn is all about. Best to purchase corn, early in the day and bring a cooler to pack the corn in for the ride home. Keep cool until ready to cook.

Corn is perfect summertime fare. For more options on cooking corn "straight up" roast corn, with their husks on, buried in hot coals for a clambake, or grill corn with their husks pulled back, puddled with chili flavored olive oil and showered with fresh pepper and salt. Sure-fire ways (no pun intended) to bring out the smoky sweetness of corn on the cob.

Whichever method you choose, for hot sugary corn on the cob, buy it now and buy it local.

BOILED CORN ON THE COB

In my house, the stick of butter in the butter dish becomes a former shadow of itself after a session of rolling the hot, cooked corn over and over right on the stick of butter.

Serves as many as you like

Fresh corn - for the required number of servings
1 stick, unsalted butter

Coarse (kosher) salt and freshly ground pepper

1. Bring a large pot of water to the boil. Large enough to accommodate the amount of corn you are cooking. Put in the corn, cover the pot and bring immediately back to the boil. Cook 1 or 2 minutes at most. Remove from heat and drain the corn. Lift them onto paper towels and pat dry. Serve at once rolled in sweet butter and sprinkled with salt and pepper.

GRILLED CORN ON THE COB

Students frequently ask me for the best way to grill corn. The following method is from a dear friend and colleague, Bonnie Barnes of Atlanta, Ga.

Bonnie also likes it hot.

Serves as many as you like

Fresh corn for the required number of servings
2 drops chili oil to 1/4 cup extra-virgin olive oil
Coarse (kosher) salt.

1. Pull back the husks, then pull off one or two outer husks from each corn and set aside. Remove the silks and discard. Tie the husks back with the reserved strips, leaving the kernels exposed.

2. Mix the two oils in a small bowl. Brush the kernels with a coating of the combined oils and a sprinkle of salt.

3. Preheat a gas grill or coals until ashen gray. Brush the husks with additional oil and grill over hot coals for 3 1/2 minutes on each side until husks are charred. Serve hot.

ROASTED CORN ON THE COB

Bury your corn in hot coals for a clambake or barbecue, then lather it with sweet butter, salt and cayenne (optional)

Serves as many as you like

1. Preheat your coals until ashen gray.

2. Meanwhile, pull back the husks then pull off one or two outer husks from each corn and set aside. Remove the silks and discard. Rewrap the corn with the husks and tie the open end with the reserved strips to secure them. Immerse the corn in cold water for 5-10 minutes allowing them to get thoroughly soaked.

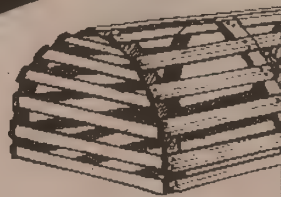

3. Shake excess water from the corn and bury them in hot coals to cook, turning occasionally, for 40-45 minutes, until tender and toasty.

Dining IN THE HAMPTONS

NEW MANAGER, MENU ITEMS AT ROWDY HALL Rowdy Hall (324-8555) has announced the hiring of a new manager, Jay Short. Jay comes to Rowdy Hall after two years of managing private estates in East Hampton. A member of the Montauk Rugby Club, Jay resides in East Hampton with his wife Jennifer and their baby Julia. Rowdy Hall recently added some delicious new dishes to their lunch menu. Look for the following new selections: Classic egg salad sandwich on toasted homemade white bread with a mixed green salad; Iowa Skinny (cornmeal, fried pork loin sandwich, sliced pickles, homemade coleslaw); and Oyster Po'Boy (fried fresh oysters on club roll with homemade coleslaw).

LI WINE DINNERS AT PACIFIC EAST Pacific East's (267-7770) popular Long Island Wine Tasting Dinners continue through August. Each dinner features a five-course dinner prepared by Chef Michael Castino with each course paired with a wine from the featured vineyard of the evening. The dinner begins at 7 p.m. with a reception featuring passed hors d'oeuvres and wine. A representative from the vineyard will be present at each dinner to explain the wines and to answer any questions. The price for the dinners will be $59.95 per person plus tax and gratuity. The schedule for August is as follows: August 2 - Bedell Cellars, August 9 - Macari Vineyards, August 16 - Channing Daughters, August 23 - Osprey's Dominion, and August 30 - Duck Walk Vineyards.

SPA MENUS AT GURNEY'S INN The Sea Grille at Gurney's (668-2345) is now offering special low fat spa prix fixe menus for lunch and dinner. The lunch menu is available from noon to 3 p.m. and is $15 per person and the dinner menu is available from 5:30 p.m. to 10 p.m. and is $25 per person.

COMEDY NIGHT AT TIERRA MAR Tierra Mar (288-2700) in Westhampton Beach is currently offering comedy night on Wednesday evenings. The evening includes a three-course prix fixe dinner and the comedy show of the evening for $38 per person. The show will feature top New York City comedians from Comedy Central, Caroline's, Dangerfield's, The Comic Strip, The Gotham Comedy Club and The Rosie O'Donnell Show.

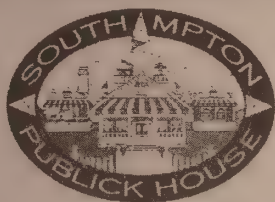

MARTINI LOUNGE AT TSUNAMI Tsunami restaurant (329-6000) now features an exciting martini lounge every Friday night. Look for specialty martinis like mango, guava, coconut and Asian pear. Tsunami's sushi and appetizer menu is served until 1 a.m. for those looking for a late night snack. For further information and reservations, call Tsunami restaurant.

BABETTE'S SUMMER HOURS Babette's (329-5377) is now open from 8 a.m. to 11 p.m. everyday except Wednesday when they close at 4 p.m.

WATERSIDE DINING Next time you're looking for a water view to complement our meal, check out these East End hot-spots: Nick's in Montauk (668-4800), Tierra Mar in Westhampton (288-2700), The Beacon in Sag Harbor (725-7088), Oakland's in Hampton Bays (728-6900), Gurney's Sea Grill in Montauk (668-9180), Riccardo's Seafood House in East Hampton (324-0000), and The Seafood Barge in Southold (765-3010).

Dining IN THE HAMPTONS

Our dining experience at Henry's was a true delight. The manager Jeffrey Smith greeted us at the door and he was a perfect host, escorting us to the bar as we waited for our table. This gave us a perfect opportunity to watch the people enter and the room as it began to take on the magical sounds of a bistro. The crowd was very sophisticated and the atmosphere created the perfect ambiance for the guests to enjoy. The restaurant is very large and the white tiled ceilings add a very European flare. There is local artwork on the walls that changes monthly, everything about the decor is extremely chic. The bar has more than enough space to handle the late night bar scene that it attracts. I spoke with the executive chef, Paul Delfavero just before we sat down, he was very straightforward with me and he said that his cooking style reflected his personality. "Only the finest ingredients go into my dishes", he told me that he toured France for three years and was taught how to select the best flavors to enhance his dishes. He had been a chef at Nick and Tony's for seven years as well as working in New York City at Perigot. I met with his sous chef, Gretchen Menser, who also worked at Nick and Tony's, they looked like they knew how to handle a busy kitchen and keep it running smoothly. Paul would prepare his signature dishes for us which would include a Gateau of jumbo lump crab meat with fresh horseradish and cilantro mint vinaigrette, a spinach salad with crispy bacon and chicken livers, and a seafood chowder that sounded so amazing that I could not wait to taste it. These were just the appetizers and the next course would be a whole grilled Loup de Mer, which is a Mediterranean fish with roasted artichokes, Yukon gold potatoes and French radishes, grilled sirloin steak, and my favorite, the porcine crusted tuna with sauteed spinach and a spaghetti with clams, mussels white wine, garlic parsley and bread crumbs that my guests and I were so impressed with with the pasta that we ate every last drop, even dunking our bread in the sauce because the flavor was so intense that we could not stop ourselves.

Henry's
Main St., Bridgehampton
537-5665

I was most impressed by our waiter Mathew Evenson, he could not have been more professional, catering to our every need and carefully explaining each dish to us. We knew that he was going to make sure that everything was perfect and had it not been he would see to it that it was taken care of. The entire meal was a success, the owner Frank Gemino spoke with us at the table and was very cordial, this was his third season in Bridgehampton and he was very happy with the way the restaurant was operating. I noticed that he was very interactive with the clientele stopping by the tables to say hello and shake hands with familiar customers.

The finale, the dessert, a warm chocolate tart with bitter sweet chocolate sorbet, lemon tart with a sugar cookie crust covered by a caramel cage and served with a side of lemon sorbet all were elegantly presented and tasted divine.

Henry's is open seven days a week serving dinner from 6-11p.m. and brunch on Saturday and Sunday from 11:30-2:30 p.m. the menu includes a country chicken hash, French toast, eggs benedict, poached salmon, a perfectly cooked hamburger and a pasta dish. Henry's offers a three-course prix fixe for $24 on Mondays through Thursday, consisting of soup or salad, chicken, salmon or a pasta dish, and for the dessert, summer berries with a Tahitian vanilla ice cream. Make your reservations soon; you will not be disappointed.

Dining IN THE HAMPTONS

Giordano's is located on a picturesque winding stretch of Noyac Road, a few miles west of the North Haven beach dotted by umbrellas and small sail boats. Slow down and look for its distinguishing sign and colorful awnings that face the road. Although its outer appearance is not pretentious, according to this reviewer it is one of the best Italian restaurants on Long Island, under the relatively new management of Betti and Michael Dowling.

The four of us —my companion and I, and our two friends from St. Louis, Ed and Madelene Boccia—arrived at about 3:15 p.m. Betti, greeted us as we entered and escorted us to our table; she made us feel as comfortable as old friends. With a broad smile, she said, "Since this is your first visit, you must try an assortment of our favorite appetizers." These included mussels marinara, mozzarella caprice, portobello mushrooms, and a cold antipasto. Much to our surprise, this was followed by a mixed salad, and before we could order our entrees, Gena, our waitress, brought us delicious servings of penne prepared in a delicate tomato and cheese sauce topped by sprigs of fresh parsley. As we enjoyed these tasty treats, we commented on the generous servings and wondered if we would have room for the entrees we had yet to order.

When Gena returned to take our orders, she noticed that we hadn't finished our appetizers. "Oh, don't rush, it will take a little time to prepare your entrees. Everything is cooked to order." She then mentioned some of the specials, and we decided to try a variety of dishes: Ed selected the eggplant parmigiana, Madelene, the chicken, veal and shrimp combination with cheese and tomato. My companion wanted to try the veal Marsala, and I, broiled twin lobsters tails with clams and mussels. As I was looking over the wine list, Gena suggested Sansone Chablis, which indeed went well with all our

3360 Noyac Rd., Sag Harbor
725-4444

orders.

When our entrees were brought to the table, we again were impressed by the large servings and artistic arrangement of items. The lobster tails were firm and flavorful, the mussels tender and spicy. We agreed to sample each other's orders and were pleased with the various taste sensations. Ed said that his eggplant, delicately sauteed and covered in tomato sauce and mozzarella cheese, was very authentic—and he is a stickler for perfection, having been exposed to Italian food since childhood.

As we were finishing dinner, Betti and her co-owner husband, Michael, came over to our table to get our reactions. We, of course, were profuse in our compliments. They, in turn, responded with enthusiasm and gave us a brief "snapshot" of their involvement in the restaurant business. This is their second one, in which their son, John, takes an active role, even though—would you believe—his main discipline is computer science. Michael beamed when he told us that John is a "Jack of all trades", being responsible for designing the new rear patio — and he also assists in the preparation of their many delicacies.

At this point, Gena, always attentive, came over with a tray of deserts which made my eyes pop, even though I wondered where I would find room for even one more morsel. The assortment consisted of a wide variety of enticing items, including various mousses, such as champagne fantasy, raspberry fantasia and cappuccino—as well as sorbets: lemon, mango, coconut, orange and pineapple. We decided to sample a few of these, as well as some cappuccino and espresso coffee.

To say this was a memorable meal is an understatement—and the prices are modest according to present-day standards. For instance, appetizers run from $8.95 to $18.95; pasta dishes, from $14.95 to $17.95; veal dishes are all $19.95. Chicken, fish and steaks run the gamut from $16.95 to $29.95. And if you are in the mood for a pizza, there is an excellent selection ranging from $9.95 to $12.95—and you can also create your own, selecting your own toppings.

"Pasta Nights" are Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday, with a complete dinner from $11.95 to $13.95. If you're into jazz, keep in mind that Giordano's has it going from 10:00 p.m. to 2:00 a.m. every Thursday. And "Happy Hour" is featured from 3:30 to 5:00 p.m. Catering is also available.

Dining IN THE HAMPTONS

"If it's swimming, I can cook it." At 10 am, the blue fish and flukes are caught from Peter Thomas' 16' boat, iced down within minutes and then brought to Jeneen's Restaurant by 2 p.m. By five, they're sizzling in this chef's pans. Decades of experience go into the Italian seafood that Pete prepares, the culmination of lessons he first learned in childhood from his Italian neighbors, back in the East Flatbush and Coney Island sections of Brooklyn. Starting at fifteen, he spent a decade as a fourth generation journeyman cutter at the Fulton Fish Market, then more years in the kitchens of Joe's, Randazzo's, Buckley's and other city eateries. This all adds flavor and spice to the meals Peter serves in this East Hampton restaurant.

"It's the smell, the look..." of the food that tells Pete that the huge meals he prepares are done. "The trick is to let it sit for a while..." allowing his cooking talents to soak into the absolutely fresh food he cooks from the crowded kitchen at Jeneen's, located on Three Mile Harbor Road.

The unique people who work there, their varied life experiences and their positive attitudes make this small special. Co-owner Freddie Fiengo, a thirty year veteran of the Manhattan restaurant business, has influenced Peter's Italian cooking. Their occasional "turf" battles in the kitchen always yield a mouth-watering meals for the hundreds of diners who crowded in on weekends. Freddie's "special" artichokes, which he throws everyone out of the kitchen to make, competes with Pete's "hot" smoked salmon, soaked in a secret brine recipe, dried, and then smoked.

"America's original recipe," is how Peter refers to his smoking technique, one he got and modified from his father. The texture, taste and quality of his smoked salmon makes it an instant sell out, for many order in advance when they know Pete's smoker is cooking. The cherry wood flavors the slow careful process that has made his smoking talent East End famous.

Peter Thomas has crafted a life most would envy. Mornings are spent fishing the local waters. Afternoons and early evenings mean slicing, dicing and cooking to the blasting sounds of classic rock, echoing through Jeneen's kitchen. If you hear the Stones, get ready for an Italian meal to remember, for once Pete gets into his rhythm, the flames dance to his beat. The blue fish simmers amid the mussels, vegetables and herbs. The filet mignon sizzles on the grill. The fluke comes out ready to melt and then explode in a wave of great taste, in your mouth.

No real secrets hide Pete's talents, just a love for the water and a drive to offer huge amounts of good food. Introduced to fishing by a local retired outdoorsman, every morning Pete now cruises to his special fishing holes to pull in incredibly fresh seafood meals, for those lucky and smart enough to order his seafood.

His addiction to the rod and reel started when he first saw his mentor land a forty pound, 36" striped bass. I traded in my Cadillac for a pickup," said this thirty-eight year old chef, who keeps his deep tan until mid-October. Fishing season starts around Christmas, when he gets gifts of new reels, rods and the other tools of his trade. February means winter nights cleaning the rigs and preparing the reels. When warm weather hits, it's early morning fishing with the staff from the restaurant with who he now shares his addiction with. Autumn sees him switching to the ocean side, casting into the surf for striped bass and blues.

A short stint as a commercial fisherman did not last, probably because his favorite book is "The Perfect Storm." Everyone down by the docks had their own horror story of dangers endured out in the deep water. Peter did not want a horror story of his own because he loves going home each night to his wife and two children. When 5 o'clock rolls around he often hears, "YES!!! Dad's home!!!" when they realize he's cooking.

Peter's home cooking is what is served at Jeneen's Restaurant. Potato zucchini soup was the special the day I met Pete, followed by an antipasto from heaven. The main course of fresh fluke disappeared, dissolving in my mouth in a haze of butter, lemon, wine and herbs. Fresh Italian sausages, brought in from the city by Freddie, graced pasta shells buried under a thick, sweet Italian sauce. And Peter's meatballs defied description, except to say that for an Irish/German boy, fine Italian cooking must be some form of instinctive art.

Cappuccino cake was served for dessert, prepared by Nicole, the waitress. Fresh strawberries surrounded the mountainous serving. A chocolate pie crust filled with cappuccino mousse, topped with whipped cream and chocolate shavings barely made it past my lips, for there was little room left in my stomach. The trick to eating at Jeneen's is to come early and hungry, ready for tastes that will linger on your tongue and in your memory.

Peter Thomas does his magic Thursday through Sunday at Jeneen's Restaurant. They open at 5 p.m. and by 6 p.m., you're fed, full and feeling good.

Step Into The Zone

What to people like Cindy Crawford, Wyona Ryder and Jennifer Anniston have in common? They are in The Zone. "Not just a diet, but a way of life" and "look and feel better than you ever have before" are just two of the slogans of a rapidly growing program that is generating excitement and interest across the greater tri-state area. With a broad spectrum of appeal, ranging from elite athletes who are interested in losing body fat and maintaining stamina, to diabetics and cardiac patients who are motivated by the research that demonstrates they can significantly improve their health status, to the average person who simply wants to have more energy, think clearer and feel better, several million people are already in "The Zone."

"The Zone" is a term made popular by Dr. Barry Sears, a biotechnology researcher and New York Times best selling author. It refers to the feeling of optimal functioning and peak conditioning achieved by highly conditioned athletes who can achieve the focus and concentration necessary to compete successfully by eating the correct balance of foods. The high carbohydrate, low fat diet, which was originally recommended for years by many experts, may be causing more health problems than it is actually preventing. There are suggestions that eating too much pasta and bread may contribute to inflammatory, autoimmune and mood disorders as well as other health problems. In contrast, "The Zone" diet recommends a specific balance of low glycemic index carbohydrates such as fruits and vegetables, lean proteins such as poultry and fish and monounsaturated fats such as olive oil and avocado.

Adherents to the diet of uniform in their praise. Their own experience backs up the claims of the diet. The problem is that in the hectic pace of life, few people have the time to properly prepare and balance their intake of food. Portion control is also very difficult with family style cooking and frequent eating out, the norm in our culture today. According to one of Dr. Barry Sears recent books, The Anti-Aging Zone, it is calorie restriction that is one of the key ingredients in achieving quality life extension.

People want convenience and structure in their lives while making an effort to maintain and improve their health and appearance. Hence, "The Zone Perfect Fresh Food Delivery Program" was born. Several thousand people (and growing) have experienced the ease and rewards of having all their food freshly prepared and delivered to their doorstep. The program includes three gourmet meals and two tasty snacks, prepared by award winning chef, Philip Adriano. The food is not only delicious and the finest quality but it also truly conforms to the dietary standards recommended by Dr. Barry Sears. In fact, the program operates under the auspices of the Eichotech Corporation, and is the only fresh food business in the country that is licensed to use the registered "Zone Perfect" trademark.

What do people like Cindy Crawford, Wyona Ryder and Jennifer Anniston feel about being in "The Zone?" They state, "they look and feel better than they ever have before and are looking forward to incorporating these changes into their way of life." So, don't let your diet failures of the past stand in your way! Enter "The Zone" and begin your new and exciting future right away. Remember, your past never equals your future, given that, your goals remain attainable! For further information call Elyse Alexander at 1-800-307-7224.

Doo Wop For A Good Cause

Little Isidore, Johnny Stompinato Jr., Junior Mintz - the stage persona of some of the members of the Inquisitors who will take the stage at the Westhampton Beach Performing Arts Center Thursday, July 27th at 8:00 PM. While the theatrics of these ten musicians and vocalists may create a surreal atmosphere, their music is the real deal. This is a high energy performance of late 50's urban rhythm and blues and the bands rendering of traditional tunes like Whispering Bells and Desire are true to the originals but are fresh as today. David Foreman, the band leader insists this is not a nostalgia show, and he is right. This is Doo Wop for now. Expect cooking sax solos, the best vocal harmonies and lots of surprises!

The show will be preceded by a mix of Rythmn and Blues music from Hamptons Crossroads courtesy of Don Maiori in the Performing Arts Center in Westhampton Beach. This venue may be the most beautiful on the East End and its state of the art sound & lighting systems make a good show even better. But the best news is that every penny of the admission price goes directly to the Suffolk County Special Olympics as the events' sponsors, The Real Estate Store, Bob Stevens Appliances and North Fork Bank, have generously underwritten all production costs.

It was not that long ago in the past when children & adults with mental retardation led a lonely, sheltered life often a burden to their family.

Over the years, Special Olympics has pursued the goal of bringing all of these people into the general populace under conditions whereby they are accepted, respected and given the chance to become useful & productive citizens. Because of benefits such as this show, Suffolk County Special Olympics provides year round sports training & competition in more than twenty olympic type sports free of charge. The county's program is the largest community based program with over 3,500 athletes & over 10,000 volunteers. And joining camps like the Hole in the Wall Gang and the Imus Ranch, Suffolk County also now has Camp North Star in Southold which provides a week long sleepover camp for Special Olympians.

So come out for a fun summer evening of doo-wop 'til you drop music for a good cause, Thursday evening, July 27, 8 p.m. Tickets are going fast so call 631- 653-5570.

Fresh Start For Fresh Air Fund

As the Fresh Air Fund celebrates their 123rd year of operation, once again several East End families have volunteered to do their part by opening their homes to disadvantaged inner city children through the Friendly Town Program. The Friendly Town Program in its history has placed close to 7000 children each summer in rural and suburban communities reaching from Canada to Virginia.

This summer over thirty families on the South Fork of Long Island, including my own, are hosting. Children range in age from six to twelve and stay anywhere from four days to two weeks or longer. The hosts represent an infinite variety of people, according to the Fund, who share a desire to help children and broaden their own horizons in the process. This year's hosts range from large families with young children of their own, to empty nesters on the verge of retirement.

In addition to getting plenty of fresh air, children enjoy all the summer has to offer in the Hamptons and hopefully leave with memories that will last them, and their hosts, a lifetime. Doris Mittweg of Water Mill is the heart and soul of the Friendly Town Program on the South Fork. In addition to interviewing all prospective hosts and visiting each household where a child may potentially stay, Doris spends her summer troubleshooting, calming fears, helping families adjust and generally keeping tabs on all the children. After hosting a child herself seven years ago, the Fresh Air Fund asked her to be the South Fork Chairman, a post she has tirelessly dedicated herself to for the last six years, all the while hosting a child herself each summer. Hosts in the area can rest assured that she is only a phone call away should you have a question, problem or if real trouble arises.

Most hosts will agree that sponsoring a Fresh Air Fund child is a worthwhile but challenging proposition. All of us first time hosts experienced those initial jitters as well as an adjustment period of a day or two. Some of our guests made a smooth transition into our families while others did not. Although over 65% of children are invited back by the same family summer after summer, as in life all matches aren't perfect.

The Fresh Air children are enrolled by over sixty different social service and community organizations located in low-income neighborhoods in the five boroughs of New York City. Each agency is responsible for screening each application and registering them for the program. Then the Fresh Air Fund, along with each area chairman thoroughly analyzes perspective hosts and children to come up with what would seem to be good matches, however, one can never be certain.

Adeline and Olaf Neubert of Sagaponack, along with their two young children, hosted a seven year old boy this summer who just didn't fit in with the family. It was a hard but good experience, they agree, and even though we had a hard time this summer we would definitely try it again next year with a different child.

Conversely, many East End families have had very positive experiences and have developed year round relationships with their Fresh Air child. Louise and Jeff of East Hampton are hosting twelve year old Anthony for a third summer. Although they realize that they were lucky to host a child who they all got along with they have learned along the way some strategies that have helped their relationship thrive. We're not here to entertain them, Louise advises, we are here to pay attention to them, listen to them and have them become a part of our family for two weeks. They themselves have grown children who return home to be with Anthony when he comes and Jeff takes two weeks off from his Manhattan based real estate business to dedicate his time to Anthony.

Although they have had their challenging moments, they unequivocally agree that they know that they are making a difference in his life, a prospect that is overwhelmingly gratifying. In fact there are no specific requirements to become a host, but Mittweg warns that families should go into the experience with manageable expectations. She has too often seen people with misguided intentions give up on their guests only days into a visit, scenario Mittweg obviously doesn't want to see. In fact some of this years hosts agreed that one shouldn't get involved with this program to be a hero to some kid. As with most things that are worthwhile, the gratification is not always immediate. Hosts don't always walk away with a clear sense that they have affected a child's life. But on some level, hosts know that they have given a disadvantaged child an experience that will somehow have an impact on who he becomes somewhere down the road.

At the very least, the experience should be pleasurable for all involved. "It's not an easy thing, but it should be some sort of fun," Mittweg offers, fun the Hamptons has to offer. Fresh Air kids love to do the same things that all kids love to do, including going to the beach, swimming in the pool, having back yard barbecues and just playing outdoors. This year, however, there were some other arranged activities to give the hosts some different options. Eleanor Sage Leonard, President of the Music Festival of the Hamptons, donated tickets to the Young People's Chorus of New York City performance under the Snake Hollow Road tent in Bridgehampton, a delightful evening that all of us enjoyed tremendously. Another evening was spent as a group in Agawam Park in Southampton enjoying their summer concert series and feasting on a picnic dinner.

Although many of the children expressed how much they enjoyed their short vacation in the Hamptons, it was clear that they were ready to get back to their families. Hopefully we will see many of their faces out here again next summer. For more information on the Fresh Air Fund call 1-800-367-0003.

Disposable - that which can be thrown away after use. How can anyone who's heart had been touched by a puppy become so hard and cold and unfeeling? Unfortunately it happens all the time! After the horrific ordeal of being thrown away by someone who once loved him, and having to survive the atrocities inflicted by the outside world, an abandoned dog can be picked up by a municipal animal shelter and this new "safe harbor" will then euthanize him in as little as five days! If your dog is missing from home for a few hours, I strongly advise that you contact your local shelter - immediately! If you can no longer keep your dog, there are rescue foundations, foster homes and volunteers who work day and night to find homes for unwanted dogs. Please, I implore you to try to contact some of these organizations. If you don't know where to start, try your vets office. If the problem is behavioral, I can validate, as a professional trainer, that almost all behavioral issues can be corrected or modified. To anyone who has a young dog, I beseech you to have your dog spayed or neutered. Unless your home is as big as your heart, avoid the difficulties of finding homes for unwanted puppies. As well, spaying and neutering will help to maintain good health and often prolong the life of your dog. If these medical procedures are a burden financially, there are assistance programs to help you. Again, any veterinary office will be able to advise you. The following is an actual account of one abandoned dog's life.

Tuesday, July 11, around 12:30 p.m., I was handed a fax that came into Dans Papers. It was the beginning of a very long, stressful, heartbreaking 48 hour struggle to save one precious life. The life of a very special dog named Rocky, who won the hearts of all of us who participated in making sure that this wonderful dog was given a chance. I immediately called upon several wonderful people, devoted to rescuing, caring for and finding home for dogs just like Rocky. Fortunately, this story has a happy ending so far. This is the original letter I received, verbatim.

The story begins the night of July 3rd at 11:30 p.m. when I took my golden retriever out for her last walk before retiring. Upon returning to my house, I found the most beautiful Rottweiler waiting for me on my porch. I have to admit that I was a little frightened. But within minutes I found this animal to be a most docile dog. He stood there perfectly content, letting my retriever make a complete fool of herself. He stayed on my porch all night. Whenever I got up to look out the window, there was this face, pressing up against the glass, looking at me with those sad eyes. The next day, July 4th, we put Rocky, the name I gave him, behind the gate of our community tennis court. I placed a number of calls to get someone to come for the dog, but it was a holiday weekend. Only one person was on duty at the Dog Pound. My neighbors and I brought him trays of food and water, and he rested under the limited amount of shade. A neighbor walked Rocky around the court a few times, and Rocky went with him more than willingly. At the end of the day, "The Dog Catcher" came and took Rocky to the Brookhaven Animal Shelter. He was given approximately a week to be adopted before being put down. I visited Rocky every day, bringing him little treats. When it came close to the day of putting him down, I gave the shelter a deposit to delay this heartbreaking termination. It gave Rocky until July 18th when his fight to survive would be over. I implore someone out there to save Rocky. I feel that there was a reason why he found my porch, and even though I can't take him, I think God knew that if anyone would go to great lengths for this dog, it was me! Rocky needs a permanent home NOW. Is there someone out there that will take him in? I named him "Rocky for a reason- HE'S A REAL CON-TENDER!!!

Linda Strom, Manorville, N.Y.

On July 17th, I received this subsequent letter. I hope that it touches your heart as it has touched mine.

After the above letter was written, I continued with my search to find Rocky a home. I stayed in touch with Jenna Robbins at Dan's Papers who worked diligently with her contacts. Because of Jenna's great compassion for animals, and her unyielding determination, she was able to put me in touch with Mindy Washington of Welcome Home Sanctuary. Mindy then became for me, a real "tower of strength". Then the worst happened. Late in the afternoon of July 13th, I received a call from Lou Codero, Supervisor of the Brookhaven Shelter. Rocky was running a dangerously high fever, he wasn't eating or drinking and though he was put on antibiotics, he was "going under". He said Rocky needed more care than they could give him and the best thing was for me to get him out of there! I left my office at the Brookhaven National Laboratory's Fire Department where I work in the Emergency Services Division. I contacted my personal Veterinarian, Dr. Richard Savino of the Center Moriches Veterinary Clinic who said he would wait for me. Because of the condition Rocky was in, I was too scared to drive with him alone. I offered money for someone to help me transport him, but no one was available. I called various taxi services, but to no avail. I couldn't waste any more time. I thought of the Fire House where I worked, and someone who I know loves dogs; Jim Vaz. I called hoping I wouldn't miss him as it was almost 5:00 p.m. Jim told me to "calm down and he would be there with a truck in 15 minutes. Jim came almost immediately, and put Rocky into his truck. I followed in my car. All I remember thinking was "hang in there Rocky" - and he did! Dr. Savino saw Rocky immediately. Rocky had a severe upper respiratory infection, intestinal parasites, and was suffering from malnutrition and anemia. I watched Dr. Savino work on Rocky, and then hold this gentle dog in his arms. He put Rocky down on the floor, and Rocky walked over to me and rested his face on my leg. I left Rocky at Dr. Savino's clinic and went home. I contacted Mindy Washington to advise her of what transpired. She made immediate arrangements to have Dr. Jonathan Turetsky & staff at The Veterinary Clinic of East Hampton provide the follow-up medical care, and Mindy, along with other members of the fledgling organization, Welcome Home Sanctuary, would work on finding Rocky a loving home. The next day Rocky was on the mend. Mindy and her husband Gary went to Dr. Savino's clinic to pick up Rocky. I met them there. Mindy's insurmountable love for animals has no boundaries. I am fortunate to have met her. I said my goodbyes and took one last look at the dog I found...the real contender in this story - Rocky.

I would like to thank the following people for being there when I needed help.

Jenna Robbins, Harley's Angels Dog Training

Mindy Washington, Welcome Home Sanctuary.

Dr. Richard Savino, Center Moriches Veterinary Clinic.

Jim Vaz, Brookhaven National Laboratory's Emergency Services Division.

Dr. Jonathan Turetsky, Dr. Andrew Pepper & the staff

at The Veterinary Clinic of East Hampton

And last but not least, I would like to dedicate this story to all of the "Rockys" out there... who in the final round, lost the fight, and will never be remembered. But rather, as what might have happened to Rocky, will only be documented as having been—"Removed from Brookhaven Animal Shelter's Pen #__ for Euthanasia" on __ if that much.

Linda Strom, Manorville N.Y.

The fate of unwanted animals is well known. Despite the efforts of many people, abandonment, euthanasia and warehousing are still the most typical options.

To update you, Rocky is doing very well and is receiving the best care possible. He is also receiving lots of much needed love and attention. He has shown no signs of aggression whatsoever!! He is sweet, eager to please and is a great companion. I cherish the time I'm able to spend with him and will always remember the way he rests his head in my lap. But now it's up to you. Rocky just needs one loving person or family to "TAKE HIM HOME". He is a pure bred Rottweiler, probably German. He is small, presently weighing only 72 lbs., but it is expected that he will fill out to about 80-85 lbs. Rocky is between 1 & 1 1/2 years old. Dr. Turetsky will be neutering him and he will be vaccinated. If you are interested in adopting this wonderful, gentle, intelligent dog, please contact Mindy Washington at 631-287-5428. Thank you, Jenna Robbins

Mill House Inn

The charming 18th century house across from Old Hook Windmill on North Main Street in East Hampton was originally built by the Parsons family in 1790. What is now known as the Mill House Inn was once a traditional Cape Cod saltbox very much like the "Home Sweet Home" building in the National Historic District of the village at the other end of Main Street. It was only one-and-a-half stories high a century ago and was symmetrically divided by a center door.

The house, which is now located at 33 North Main Street was originally number 31 and had an old barn behind it that was moved to another location. Abraham Parsons had lived in the house from 1772 to 1844, with his son William, who out-lived him by only two years.

The heir to the house, William Parsons' eldest son, William Lewis Parsons, went off to do some mining in Denver, Colorado in 1869. After taking part in the Civil War he settled in Kansas—never to be seen in East Hampton again.

No less adventurous, his younger brother, Abraham Stratton Parsons, had gone on a whaling voyage out of Greenport with Captain George Hand in 1857 and decided to move to Amagansett after he married.

One of 300 Irish immigrants who survived a shipwreck on the shores of Amagansett during the summer of 1851, Patrick Lynch was immediately hired by Colonel William D. Parsons, who sold the Parsons house to him in 1860, after Lynch had worked on his farm at Fireplace in the Springs for nine years.

The Irish immigrant had originally intended to journey all the way to California in search of gold, but fate led him to purchase the house and settle in East Hampton instead. He remodeled the house in 1898, raised the roof in order to create a full second story, and added a porch with a side entrance.

East Hampton had no Roman Catholic Church at the time so Patrick Lynch, James Gay, and Richard Gilmartin opened up their homes for services.

Services were held at the Lynch home every week and the congregation was so large that many of the worshipers overflowed into the garden areas.

The house remained in the Lynch family until 1973 and like so many historic buildings in East Hampton it was used as a boarding house for summer residents and migrant workers. Breakfast and dinner were served on the premises.

In 1973 the building was sold to Kuang Chung Tsang, who took in boarders and served meals.

In 1980 the house was sold to Cymrot and Levine and was subdivided in 1981. The main house was sold to Ann and Hans Ryden, who converted it into an inn after adding bathrooms. It was called the Ryden House and guests were served breakfast.

In 1984 Mary Boyd purchased the inn and continued to serve breakfast with the accommodations until she sold it to Edmund Churley and Jerold S. Cohen, who also served breakfast.

A year later, the new owners Kevin and Barbara Flynn served a hot breakfast, and in 1994, Inn Keepers, Daniel and Katherine Hartnett took it over and continued to operate the inn under the name of Mill House, since it sits opposite the old windmill that marks the separation of North Main Street and Montauk Hwy.

The new proprietors are Sylvia and Gary Muller and they serve the most elaborate breakfast in the entire history of this historic inn.

Gary Muller, the former owner of a 250-seat restaurant in a bustling downtown area of New Jersey—has applied for a liquor license and may be offering intimate dinners to his guests in the near future.

His wife, Sylvia majored in music and went on to pursue a career in television before becoming the innkeeper.

The inn boasts of having the softest feather beds that can be found in all of the Hamptons and the owners take pride in the coordination of antiques that makes the decor of each room unique while offering their guests all the modern conveniences of the 21st Century.

EAST END FARMING WITH JOE GERGELA

Toni Munna, our LIFB public relations director, did a great job describing the day Hillary Clinton came to town. Regardless of anyone's individual politics, she is the First Lady of the United States, and that position alone commands respect in my book. I have had the opportunity to meet her and talk to her on several occasions. She is bright, articulate and has presence, but what impressed me the most is her ability to listen and understand our issues quickly. Naturally, as she campaigns around the state, Hillary has a lot to learn about New York and New Yorkers. But so does Rick Lazio. I have known Rick for a long time, as a county legislator and as a four-term congressman. Over the years, Farm Bureau has enjoyed an excellent relationship with Rick and the entire Long Island congressional delegation. As Toni pointed out last week, LIFB is non-partisan, we do not have a PAC, and we do not endorse candidates. We do, however, provide forums for Farm Bureau members and for the public to learn the views of the various candidates. We are awaiting a date to hold a public forum for Rick Lazio to visit with us on the East End. Stay tuned!

This past weekend, we held another event. The New York State Agricultural Society held their summer board of directors meeting here last Friday, followed by a dinner that evening and a farm tour on Saturday. The

Ag Society has been around for 160 years or so, making it the oldest farm organization in the state. They were the creators of the New York State Fair, and a co-sponsor of the Cornell Empire State Leadership Institute, known as LEAD NY. The Society is also a sponsor of the Century Farm Program, by which a 100-year farm is annually selected and recognized, and the annual Cap Creal award for best farm story coverage in the media. It is a "feel good" organization with wonderful agricultural leaders involved in all of their activities. I have had the privilege of serving on the Ag Society Board for the last four years and have met some tremendous people. For example, Dick Call and his wife, Bea, who were here. With thousands of acres, the Call family has one of the largest farms upstate. Dick is a trustee of Cornell University (an impressive accomplishment) and Dick's brother, Dave, is the former Dean at the Cornell College of Agriculture and Life Sciences. Peter Ten Eyck and his wife, Rose Marie, are apple farmers from near Albany. Peter is also a trustee at Cornell University and involved in many agricultural leadership positions. Bob Bitz, of Plainville Turkey Farms, is a well-known, respected farmer and leader. He is involved with former Ag Commissioner Dick McGuire and Ken Pollard in establishing the Witter Farm Museum at the NY State Fairgrounds in Syracuse. Joe Peck is a humorous speaker and journalist from Saratoga. The list goes on to include many families promoting agriculture in New York.

I would be remiss if I didn't mention the fabulous dinner at Paumanok Vineyards, home of Charles and Ursula Massoud. Southold restaurateur, John Ross, and his son, Stewart, prepared a culinary delight. The striped bass encrusted with potato and parmesan was unbelievable, and that was only one course! Charles and John selected the perfect wine for each course. The dessert was fresh peach and blueberry cobbler served with a late harvest Riesling. Nothing better in this life! After dinner, Justine Wells - Riverhead Town historian and mom of my buddy, Lyle - gave an historical perspective of Long Island's agricultural heritage. The talk was extremely engaging. The members of the Ag Society board left knowing that Long Island agriculture is special and that Long Island is a special place - a place worth fighting for to hold on to for the future!

It's Our Garden WITH ELIZABETH AND CROW MILLER

CUCURBITACEAE FAMILY: CUCUMBERS. MELONS AND SQUASH

The Cucumber is a warm season crop and will be killed by even a light freeze, but since it has a relatively short growing season, they can be grown directly from seed or from transplants in pots where the roots will not be disturbed during transplanting. Cucumbers can be grown in most any type of soil, but your success will vary with the soil type. If you want an early crop, they will do fine in a sandy soil since this crop will not require water throughout the summer. But, if you want a later crop, you need to plant in a more clayey soil where there will be abundant water throughout the growing season. Cucumbers prefer an acid soil, but the pH should be kept above 5.5.

The soil should have a high organic matter content. It is a practice to place manure in the soil where you plan to plant cucumbers. We usually (composted) place about two feet of manure in a hole and then put four inches of soil over it. This gives the cucumbers a good shot of nitrogen (N) and also provides a soil environment that will retain a lot of water.

There are probably as many ways to grow cucumbers as there are gardeners. The standard methods are to plant them in rows or hills. In rows, the plants are placed six to twelve inches apart in rows that are to six feet apart. This consumes a lot of garden space. You might try putting your rows in between your peas just before the peas are to come out, and let the cucumbers take over the pea space after the peas are gone. Planting cucumbers on hills usually means two to three plants per hill, where the hills are spaced every two feet.

If you start your plants indoors, you should start about four weeks before you plan to transplant. The plants should be grown in containers that will not disturb the roots when you transplant them.

After transplanting, you have to keep your eyes open for the inevitable attack by the beetles. The beetles usually show up about the time that the cucumber puts out its first true leaf.

Muskmelons require a long frost-free season. They grow best where there is plenty of sunshine, heat, dry air, and soil moisture. Most varieties will take eighty to 100 days to mature.

The soil should be well-drained, a sandy or silty loam being the best. The organic matter should be high and the soil should be fertile. They do best in a slightly acidic soil, pH 6 to 7. You should rotate muskmelon with other crops so that nematode populations will not build up in the soil. The best rotation crop is a legume (beans, peas, clover) since it builds up the nitrogen (N) in the soil.

Muskmelon plants are shallow-rooted just beyond the vines. You must be very careful when weeding. Pull the weed, rather than chopping down deep with a hoe. All this can be avoided if you use a good mulch.

Like the muskmelon, the watermelon requires a long frost-free growing season. They prefer hot weather and need 80 to 120 days to mature. Most watermelons in America, therefore, are grown in the southern states.

Watermelons do best on freshly cleared land that has sandy-loam, and soil rich in humus, fertile, and well-drained. Like all their relatives, it has a shallow root system and the same precautions must be observed when weeding.

Watermelons should not be harvested until ripe. If harvested early, they will not have developed full color nor full sugar content.

Summer squash are eaten when the fruit is immature, and the fruit is usually prepared by boiling. Winter squash is usually baked, rather than boiled.

Now, what of pumpkins? There is no consistent distinction between winter squash and pumpkin. Again, it is a matter of usage.

Pumpkins and winter squash are harvested differently than either muskmelons or cucumbers. You should cut the pumpkins and winter squash from the vine, leaving about a two to three inch stalk on the fruit. If you do not leave the stalk on the fruit, the fruit will dry out faster and not store as long.

A good method for growing pumpkins is to plant them in between your rows of corn. This makes weed control difficult in the corn in the early part of the season, but later on, you should not have this problem. "Let's get growing!"

AND THE ISLAND IN BETWEEN

POLICE BLOTTER

Another wily woodsman, stalking the Northwest Woods of East Hampton, struck and made off with $480 worth of spruce spoils. The six trees were uprooted from a residence on Saddle Lane.

Meanwhile, a short distance away, on Hedges Banks, two rhododendrons were plucked from the property of Stanley Stein. The Northwest Woods man told police that this has happened repeatedly since 1998.

In Springs, the skull of a steer that was mounted on the front of a shed as decoration was stolen. The owner of said stolen steer skull told police that it had three-foot horns and was worth $500. And that's no bull.

An Amagansett man, in retribution for his neighbor's barking dogs, decided to reciprocate by parking his car in front of her house, setting off the alarm and leaving it there. Police have told the alarm man to stop.

In a clear case of alcohol abuse, Southampton Town Police arrested a 24-year-old Yaphank man at the intersection of Montauk Highway and Shinnecock Avenue after they witnessed the man throw a full can of beer from a moving vehicle. He was charged with littering. The condition of the beer is unknown.

In Hampton Bays, Town Police discovered Thomas Castellano, 26, of Bellport, on Argonne Road behind the wheel of a car, unconscious. He was transported by ambulance to the hospital where he was arrested for driving while impaired by drugs and refusing to take a chemical test.

In Southampton, an 87-year-old woman was discovered trapped in a car at the Greek Festival. Olga Deny, 53, of Blue Point was attending the festival with Marguerite Senger for whom she works as a live-in caretaker. Deny left Ms. Senger in the back seat of a 1990 Buick with all of the windows closed and the engine off. The car was parked in direct sunlight and the temperature inside was over 90 degrees according to police. Passers-by noticed Ms. Senger banging on the window, pleading for help, and helped the elderly woman out of the vehicle.

Ms. Senger was transported to Southampton Hospital where she was treated for heat stroke, heat exhaustion and dehydration. Meanwhile, police waited for the return of Ms. Deny. Over 40 minutes later, she returned and was arrested. Deny admitted that Ms. Senger had been left alone, but claimed that it was only for five minutes. Deny was charged with endangering the welfare of a vulnerable elderly person in the second degree. If she is convicted of the class "E" felony, she could face up to four years in prison.

Dan's LETTERS

ROCKER ROLLS

Dear Dan,

I've had the good fortune to come upon Dan's Papers at the dispenser at Lincoln Center a few years ago, and I have been a faithful follower of your witty columns ever since...Most of which I share with friends as far away as Seattle (WA)—plus all of Jerry Cimisi's truth-in-reportage writings on the TWA 800 downing.

I feel compelled, though, to take exception to some of your meanderings in "The Rocker Adventure" (July 7). That situation was blown out of proportion by the media-fed by the frenzy of nutty Mets fans...They had been throwing garbage and insults at John Rocker way before the Sports Illustrated article appeared. And what did the poor guy say? He made observations on the No. 7 riders, that I, a New Yorker, also see all the time on any other line. Weird or not—and you forgot the green hair—it's a way of life here in the city—but it stands to reason it can be an eye-opener for a stranger. Imagine if, and when, the Martians land...

I believe you were unfair to J.R. and I am surprised! You..of all people..who usually carry the banner for non-conformists. Do you think that even if those out-of-control METS fans could read, they would heed the appeals from cooler heads and higher-ups to "show compassion" and let peace be? Ah bah! J.R. apologized—all for naught—as he'll never hear the end of it. But give him credit, it was a noble gesture. As for his galloping out of the bullpen to the mound, that's what he always does. That's his way—or didn't you know?

I've switched allegiance from the Mets to the Yanks after the Mets rottenly let go of Davey Johnson who had just won the World Championship for them! The Yanks are the champs as they will show it to the World again in 2 naught, naught, naught. And you're the man.

Very truly yours,
E.A. Essesian
New York

BROOKHAVEN LABS KIDS TOURS

Dear Dan,

How ironic to have an ad, targeting kids, form the Brookhaven National Lab's Summer Sunday tours on page 37 of your July 7 issue. Just a few pages on, on page 41, we were horrified to read that uranium 233 levels at the Lab are 300 times higher than Brookhaven reports they are.

So much for care-free fun on the East End. It's about time we woke up and started to make noise.

Sincerely,
Annie Wollock
Sag Harbor

HAIRS TO CHANCELLOR SILLERMAN

Dear Dan,

My, Chancellor Bob Sillerman looks remarkably like Professor Bob Reeves. I had no idea the same man who gave me my diploma this May—and paid Alan Alda to take off his toupe the other night at Bay Street's Gala—was also underground at the Southampton Writer's Conference and acting as second reader for my Masters thesis. And all this time we thought Bob Reeves was just an author and humorist; his students had no idea he's been moonlighting as a millionaire.

Jokes aside, perhaps next year Bob Sillerman will actually join us at the Southampton Writers Conference and enjoy the company of the local flora-of the writing kind-for a few beers at our local watering hole. Of course, while we can get pretty wild discussing narrative voice and literary agents nobody wears a toupee!

Susan Lucci And John Roland at Benefit Gala

The Family Counseling Service announced that television star Susan Lucci and news anchor John Rolland, both long time supporters of the agency, will serve as Masters of Ceremonies at its 16th Annual Benefit Gala on Saturday, August 5, at the Tenzer Estate in Quogue.

Emmy award winner Susan Lucci, critically acclaimed star of TV soap operas and prime time films, has enhanced several Family Counseling Service galas with her presence as honored guest, Master of Ceremonies, and as the 1994 recipient with her husband Helmut Huber, of the Family of Man Humanitarian Award. Ms. Lucci, who has dept audiences spellbound for more than thirty years as the dazzling Erica Kane on ABC's All My Children, is also known for her personal commitment to other charitable causes like Little Flower Children's Services.

John Roland, popular longtime anchor of the The 10 O'clock News on TV Channel 5, is well known for his charitable support of humanitarian services on Long Island and New York City. A double Emmy Award winner, many of his awards and citations pay tribute to a life of public service, including a Man of the Year Award from New York's Finest Foundation and an honorary membership in the New York City Police Detective Endowment Association.

Ms. Lucci and Mr. Roland will be presenting this year's distinguished Family of Man Award to Roger and Karen Stevens and Volunteer of the Year Awards to Ruth Bragarnick and Ted Alpert. The theme of this year's Gala, the principal fundraiser for Family Counseling Service and one of the largest benefits in the Hamptons, is "Moonlight in the Garden." Cocktails and buffet will be catered by Starr Boggs, with dance music provided by the Steven Scott Orchestra. A silent auction and a new live auction will feature top designer names in fashion, jewelry and luxury items. Tickets are $150 per person, $75 Junior (under thirty).

Since its inception twenty-nine years ago, Family Counseling Service has assisted over 100,000 adults and children throughout Suffolk County with its professional counseling programs addressing mental health issues. For further information on the agency or the Gala, call 631-288-2055.

YOU'RE PAYING HOW MUCH TO SELL YOUR HOME?

The commission that your real estate company is charging to sell your house is probably a hefty percentage of what your house is worth. At Help-U-Sell®, we have a different approach: a fee-for-services structure that allows you to choose the services you need - and pay for only the services you use. With the Help-U-Sell concept, you could save thousands of dollars when you buy or sell your next home.
